—Porter added to his various achievements on the wheel at the races on the Waltham track Wednesday by lowering the Class A. mile record. He made the distance in 2 min., 3 sec., beating McDonald's figure of 2 min., 4 sec., made at Rochester, N. Y., last week. When Porter made the new mile record he was paced by Williams and Haeger. They got away in fine order, and reached the quarter in 30.25 sec. The tandem continued its rapid work, and three pairs of legs continued to revolve with lightning-like rapidity. The half was reached in 1:45. Just prior to entering on the last quarter the tandem gave way to Butler, but kept riding in the rear of the ambitious record breaker. Butler made a pretty pick-up, but spoilt his record by later running away from Porter, who, however, was brought home in 2 min. 3 sec.

—Mr. A. W. Fairbanks, who until recently lived on Rockland street, Newton, has been visiting Mrs. J. A. Robinson, died at her Boston residence, Garrison street, Wednesday morning after a short illness. Mr. Fairbanks was born in Claremont, N. H., in 1817. He was one of the older generation of newspaper men, at 12 years of age he began his apprenticeship as a printer at Ballston Springs, N. Y. He went thence to the Detroit Advertiser, where he had charge of the job printing department. In 1837 he bought what remained of the Toledo Blade, which had suspended publication, and revived the fortunes of that sheet. In 1849 he went to Cleveland, Ohio, and bought a half interest in the Cleveland Herald, of which paper he afterward became sole proprietor. He retired from active affairs nearly ten years ago. He leaves a wife and four children. The oldest Chas. A. is an artist on the New York Sun. The interment will be at Cleveland, Ohio.

—The funeral of Tyler C. Holmes, who was one of the victims of the Waltham district accident, took place yesterday afternoon from the residence of his father, Stephen Holmes, Jewett street. There was a large attendance at the services which were conducted by Rev. Mr. Merrill, pastor of the Emanuel Baptist church. Many floral tributes were sent by friends and the various societies of which deceased had been a member. The interment was made in the Newton cemetery. A delegation of 40 members of Norumbega tribe, O. I. B. M., and a delegation representing Newton lodge, I. O. O. F., preceded the cortege to Newtonville square. There the two organizations formed a line with uncovered heads until the carriages passed by. A special car of the Newton & Boston Street Railway Company conveyed the members

—Steamer One's house was thrown open to the public July 4th and was the scene all day for a stream of visitors. Those who came enjoyed the generous hospitalities of the fire ladders who not only gave every one a cordial welcome but provided those material comforts which prove agreeable. Ice cream, lemonade, cake and cigars were served, and the committee, comprising Foreman Horrigan and Assistant Foreman Tripp, were assisted by all the members of the engine and hose companies in furnishing agreeable entertainment for the callers. Of course, the new hose wagon, built by P. A. Murry, one of Newton's enterprising business men, who has made a big reputation as a carriage builder, was greatly admired. It went into commission Tuesday night and went out on the first call early Wednesday morning, responding to an alarm from box 242. The wagon weighs 1025 lbs. light, and carries 750 feet of hose. It has the latest equipment including axes, bars, plaster hooks, etc. In every way, the new piece of apparatus, gives evidence of thorough workmanship and careful attention to every necessary requirement. The body and running gear is in red with black and gold decorations and nickel trimmings. The monogram "N. E. D." appears on the side panel of the driver's seat. The driver, by the way, P. C. Carroll, was presented by the company with a fine whale bone whip. On the silver ferule, his name is engraved. Among those who visited the engine house were a number of members of the city council, department officials, and prominent citizens. Aldermen Bothfield, Rumery and Hunt represented the upper board, and Councilmen Tolman, Parker and the other branch of the city government. It was altogether a gala occasion, which closed in the evening with a display of fireworks.

They were resting quietly on the common under the shade of a handsome tree, where one of the parties interested himself in investigating his financial condition. A few moments later they claim they were set upon by a gang of rascals and severely treated, robbery being the evident intention. They managed finally to get away and by some lively sprinting distanced their pursuers and arrived in Auburndale thankful but sore.

—Liquor was fully dispensed as usual Sunday on the Wellesley side, a heavily loaded team disposing of all its goods and driving away with a large sum as a result of the sales. The patrol wagon visited the village Sunday in its round of duty. Down on Mechanic street in the house occupied by Morris Murphy a

—The marriage of Miss Margaret Heald and John Dixon which was announced for Tuesday evening in St. Paul's church, was not solemnized there because the groom, unfortunately, had neglected to bring the marriage license. There was a big crowd of friends of the couple in the church at the time named. The bride was there dressed in a most exquisite costume. The groom had been there, but when Pastor Williams had been horror-stricken by the announcement that Mr. Dixon had forgotten the marriage license, started off to get it. City Clerk Kingsbury was finally found, but it was too late, the organizer, the pastor and the spectators, having got tired waiting. Then the wedding guests were invited to the bride-elect's home and the banquet partaken of. Next day the couple were married and now they are off enjoying their wedding trip, and happy, notwithstanding the unfortunate episode above narrated.

TWO MEN DROWNED.

ONE OF THE VICTIMS T. C. HOLMES OF THIS CITY.

A drowning accident occurred on the Charles River either Monday night or early Tuesday morning. An empty canoe, known to be the property of some well known young men of Waltham, was found floating on the water Tuesday morning.

Two young men called at the Waltham police station about midnight Tuesday and notified Sergt. Taft that while they were walking along the tracks of the Fitchburg R. R. a few minutes before they heard cries for help issuing from the Charles River. The men also said they heard a splash just before the cries.

Sergt. Taft and Officer McCarthy went to the river and procuring a boat made a search of the vicinity where the cries were heard, but could find nothing that would indicate an accident had occurred.

Tuesday morning Mrs. Frank Hunger, residing at 91 Brown street, notified the police that her husband was missing. Later it was learned that the canoe which was found was identified as the property of Mr. Hunger.

This gave proof that the young men who notified the police were not mistaken. It was later learned that Mr. Hunger and a friend named T. C. Holmes of Newton left Moody street bridge in a canoe shortly after 11 o'clock.

A hat which was recognized as the property of Mr. Holmes, was found near the north river bank at a point opposite where the accident is supposed to have occurred.

The police and a number of citizens dragged the river, and at noon, Tuesday, succeeded in finding the body of Holmes.

Frank Hunger's body was recovered later. He was a popular employee of the American Watch Co. and was 30 years of age and resides at 61 Brown street, Waltham.

He was an active member of the Waltham Canoe Club, and was elected as one of the officials of the July Fourth regatta to be held under the auspices of the club.

He had a wife and three small children, the oldest of whom is but three years.

Tyler C. Holmes resided at 80 Jewett street, this city, the home of his father and mother. He was employed by the Nonotuck Silk Company, 18 Summer street, Boston, in the capacity of book-keeper. He had filled the position for the past four years and was well liked by his employers. At one time he had been a permanent member of the Newton fire department. His genial manners and kindly disposition made him a great favorite everywhere. He was engaged to a bright and agreeable young woman and his fiancée was prostrated when the sad intelligence of the accident was brought to her.

CITY GOVERNMENT.

PUBLIC PROPERTY COMMITTEE'S FIGURES FOR THE PURCHASE OF LAND FOR A SCHOOLHOUSE THE SUBJECT OF A LIVEDLY DEBATE.

At a special meeting of the city government, Monday evening, the orders for the appropriation of sums for the purchase of land for schoolhouse locations was the occasion of quite a lively debate. The orders called for an appropriation of $12,000 for land situated on Watertown and Edinboro streets, Newtonville, and $11,000 for another lot on Webster and Oak streets, West Newton.

The discussion commenced when Alderman Thompson, chairman of the committee, moved that an order calling for the expenditure of $500 for the purpose of securing plans for the schoolhouse at Newtonville be taken from the table.

The order read that the money should be taken from the miscellaneous appropriations, but City Auditor Otis notified the board that this department was already exhausted.

While the board was in somewhat of a quandary as to what action it should take in the matter, Alderman Plummer alluded to the prices quoted for one of the lots above mentioned by the public property committee. He said that two gentlemen interested in the ownership of the property had stated to him that the land could be bought from them for $10,000, a difference of $2000 from the sum named by the committee.

Alderman Thompson felt that there must be some mistake in the figures mentioned by Alderman Plummer, but that gentleman was positive that he was correct.

Alderman Thompson suggested that the aldermen should deputize Alderman Plummer to contract for the purchase of the land, whereupon Alderman Plummer stated that he was not a member of the public property committee.

Alderman Roffe stated that if what Alderman Plummer had said was true, and he did not in the least doubt the word of a fellow alderman, it was time to call a halt and investigate.

Alderman Thompson then remarked that he should be pleased to have Alderman Plummer accompany him in the morning, with the public property committee, to the gentlemen referred to by Mr. Plummer. The latter expressed himself as perfectly willing.

Alderman Thompson stated that the gentlemen interested in the ownership of the property had appeared before the public property committee and over their signature had signed that $12,000 was the lowest that they would take.

Alderman Roffe, who was presiding in the absence of the mayor, relinquished his seat in order to say that while he did not doubt the honest intention and purpose of the public property committee, still if what Alderman Plummer had said was true it would be extravagance for the board to purchase the land at that price.

Alderman Roffe moved that the order calling for the appropriation be rescinded, and this was passed, 4 to 3, Alderman Bothfield casting the deciding vote.

A message was then sent into the common council, announcing the statement made by a member of the upper board and calling for a reconsideration of the vote upon the appropriation in that body. The council, after some discussion, refused to reconsider.

In the common council, the order for the purchase of the lot at West Newton, which the aldermen passed was sent back, the lower board voting to non-concur. As a result of that action both branches held a joint conference which lasted until long after midnight.

Common Council Business.

The common council met in regular session, President Knapp occupying the chair.

Petitions were referred as follows: C. S. Davis, for sidewalks on Lake avenue; George W. Morse, et al., for the laying out, grading and acceptance of Morton street, from Mill to Homer street; William Macomber, et al., for concrete walks on Pelham street; Owen Hill for stand for carriage, corner of Otis and Walnut street; Mary E. Fuller, for sidewalks on Shaw street.

The quarterly report of the chief of fire department was presented and accepted.

It was voted to non-concur on the amended order authorizing the placing of Steamer 2 into service and appropriating $8000 instead of $10,000 for alterations of Steamer 2 house.

The order from the aldermen authorizing the purchase of 55,000 square feet of land on Webster street as a site for a schoolhouse, and appropriating $1100 therefor was refused passage in concurrence by a vote of 9 to 2, three members absent.

The order authorizing the sale of eleven bonds of the denomination of $1000 each for the purchase of this land on Webster street also failed of passage in concurrence, four voting in the affirmative and seven in the negative.

The order which came up originally in the common council authorizing the committee on public property to advertise for plans and specifications for a 12-room brick school building in West Newton, and providing for an expenditure therefor of an amount not exceeding $500 came back to the lower branch as the aldermen refused concurrent action. It was, therefore, voted to rescind the previous action of the council in adopting this order and it was laid on the table.

SPECIAL MEETING OF THE ALDERMEN.

The board of mayor and aldermen held a special meeting. President Bothfield presided in the absence of Mayor Fenno who was unable to be present on account of illness. An order was adopted authorizing the expenditure of $2700 for repairs on the Adams schoolhouse.

A message was received from the common council declining to consider the adoption of the order authorizing the purchase of 71,050 feet of land for a schoolhouse site on Watertown and Edinboro streets and appropriating $12,000 therefor.

Messages were also received refusing the adoption of the order substituting the appropriation of $8000 for that of $10,000 for repairs on Steamer 2 house, and refusing to concur on the order authorizing the purchase of 55,000 feet of land for schoolhouse purposes on Webster street and in connection therewith of the issue of eleven $1000 bonds for a term of twenty years, bearing interest at a rate not exceeding 4 per cent. per annum.

A conference of both branches was agreed to on the orders providing for alterations of Steamer 2 house and for the purchase of land on Webster street. No agreement was reached on the latter. On the first order the conference resulted in a recommendation of an appropriation of $800 for the Steamer 2 building repairs and later that order received concurrent action.

Newton Hospital Meeting.

A meeting of the trustees was held at the Newton Hospital on the 20th ult. at 3.20 p. m. President Leeson was in the chair and nineteen members were in attendance namely: Madams M. L. Bacon, J. N. Bacon, Blake, Gould, Haskell, Leonard, Lowell, Mason, Paine and Shannon, Messrs. Ellison, Petter, Pratt, Shinn and Travelli, Doctors Crockett, Seales and Thayer.

The records of the last meeting were read and approved.

The Treasurer, Mr. Bullens, reported receipts of $5000 from the city of Newton covering the contribution of the whole year, $5000 as a permanent fund from Mrs. Eldridge for a free bed and $3238.81 from general sources during the quarter, while the current expenses for the three months were $5349.55 in addition to $717.63 for furnishing the Nurses' Home. The Eldridge Free Bed Fund has been invested in a mortgage having three years to run at 5 per cent. The balance remaining for running expenses amounted to $2512.17.

Dr. Shinn reported in full the work done by the executive committee since the last meeting.

It was voted that the executive committee appropriate a sum not exceeding $200 for an extension of the steam-heating plant, which promises a decided saving in fuel and expense of operation.

Mr. Pratt and Dr. Thayer reported on the work of the Training school, the latter dwelling especially, on the fine showing made by the nurses in their closing examination for the year, which was very rigid.

The following committee, Dr. Shinn, Mrs. Blake and Mrs. Haskell were appointed to purchase such articles as will completely refurnish the six rooms in the private ward at present incomplete, also to affix permanently the names of the donors to each of the rooms in the private ward.

The executive committee was empowered to make all the necessary repairs to such rooms, for owing to the reduction in charges for the care of private patients an increased number of applications have been received.

The committee appointed to prepare resolutions on the death of the late George S. Harwood submitted those published herewith which were adopted by a standing vote of all present and it was ordered that they be spread on the minutes and a copy sent to the family of the deceased and to the Newton papers.

The committee appointed to select a successor to Mr. Harwood on the board reported the name of Mr. Warren P. Tyler who was unanimously elected by ballot.

IN MEMORY OF G. S. HARWOOD.

Mr. George Shaw Harwood, a member of this board, has been called away from his earthly labors by the decree of the All-Wise Father; and while we bow in submission to the will of Him who doeth all things well, we desire to put upon record our sense of loss at the removal from us of our fellow worker and our high appreciation of the value of his services to this institution.

The Hospital management needs men of his kindly spirit, able to sympathize with the sorrows of others and willing to aid in their relief. We are grateful that for so long a time this board was permitted to have the co-operation of one who was never known to turn away from a cry of distress and whose hand was ever open to the relief of sufferers. We have had the benefit of his wise counsels and of his generous help even while the pressure of business and of many other interests made steady demands upon his time and strength.

He was with us in feeble health at a meeting held just before his departure for a foreign voyage, and manifested great interest in the proceedings of that day, but none of us realized then that for so long a time he was the last occasion we would enjoy the benediction of his presence. His presence was indeed a blessing, for his benignant spirit, his love of peace, his interest in whatever pertained to the welfare of others, and his quiet unobtrusive manner made him ever welcome and diffused an atmosphere of good will.

We are sorry that such a useful life could not have been continued longer here to aid in the further development of the Hospital and of the many other good works in which he delighted.

We are sorry for the broken ties which his departure makes in many an affectionate circle of friends. We are sorry for the poor and needy, and the struggling and the discouraged, who can never forget him and who must mourn the loss of a large hearted benefactor.

This board will always cherish affectionately the memory of his membership with us, and will always be grateful that we had so long the co-operation of one who in so many ways realized that highest type of character, a Christian gentleman.

"The Country Week" Appeal.

In response to many inquiries The Country Week committee wishes to say to the public that the contributions in support of this charity have been considerably less than in former seasons, and that the work is suffering in proportion.

Thus far only about two thirds the usual number of children have been provided for, while there are more applicants, and greater need than ever before.

Although some diminution in the receipts was to be expected, this season it seems a pity that so many little ones must be disappointed in their country anticipations, and it is earnestly hoped that generous friends enough may be found to bring the work more nearly to the previous records.

All remittances should be addressed to Wm. H. Baldwin, Pres. Boston Young Men's Christian Union, 48 Boylston street, and they will be promptly acknowledged.

Facts Worth Knowing.

In all diseases of the nasal mucous membrane the remedy used must be non-irritating. Nothing satisfactory can be accomplished with douches, snuffs, powders or astringents, because they are irritating, do not thoroughly reach the affected surfaces and should be abandoned as worse than failures. A multitude of persons who had for years borne all the worry and pain that catarrh can inflict testify to radical and permanent cures wrought by Ely's Cream Balm. Your druggist has it.

MOURNED HIS ABSENT SON.

JOHN BOYCE OF NONANTUM DIED OF A BROKEN HEART.

John Boyce of Nonantum is dead, and those who knew him say that he died of a broken heart, caused by the strange disappearance of his only son, a bright boy of 17.

The son, whose name was John, was considered by his parents a model son, and at the Newton high school he was well liked. He often evinced a desire to remain away from school, and enter an active business career. The mother and father were anxious that he should obtain an education of a higher nature, and declined to allow the son to leave school.

Young John rebelled against their wishes, but was finally silenced, and, apparently, became satisfied with the disposition of his course of action as settled by his parents.

When John was summoned to breakfast May 1, his mother received no response to repeated callings. An examination of his room showed that his bed had not been disturbed during the night. None of his clothing was missing with the exception of the suit of dark gray, which he wore every day.

The day passed and night came, but John failed to return. Mr. and Mrs. Boyce were thoroughly alarmed and notified the police authorities.

Days lengthened into weeks, but although the boy's disappearance was written up no tidings of him were received at his home on Rustic street.

The father addressed through the columns of a Boston paper an open appeal to his son. The language of the appeal was particularly touching, and at the time created widespread comment. The son was exhorted to return home at once and save his poor father and mother from dying with broken hearts.

For some weeks Mr. Boyce's health has been gradually failing, and about 10 days ago he was taken to the Newton Hospital.

Pneumonia was given as the cause of his death, but from the statements of the nurses who attended him until he breathed his last, on Sunday morning, it is learned that he was delirious, and raved incessantly about his missing boy. Mrs. Boyce remained at the bedside of her husband until he died, and asserts that he died of grief. She is in a weak condition, and mourns continually about the affliction which has befallen the family.

The police do not believe that anything serious has happened to young Boyce.

Harvard's Graduates.

Harvard's list of graduates last week was full of distinguished names, and scores of the oldest and most distinguished American families were represented. Among the noteworthy names were Cleveland Abbe, son of the eminent meteorologist; James B. Eustis, son of the United States ambassador to France, who was himself a Harvard graduate; William Cogwell, son of the Essex congressman; Frederick Law Olmstead, son of the great landscape architect; James K. Kilbreth, son of the collector of the port of New York; Horace C. Fisher, son of Col. Horace Fisher, the wellknown consul of Chili at this port, and Walter E. Stone, son of the noted Chicago journalist. Other prominent wellknown names in the list were Benjamin A. Gould, Spencer Borden, Reginald Washburn, Percival L. Turruere, R. E. Paine, Ledyard Heckscher and Edwitt Peabody Saltonstall. Perhaps the most striking name of all was that of James Burnett Lowell, son of the ex-member of congress, Edward Burnett of Southboro, and grandson of the late James Russell Lowell, whose name the young man's children will bear, in accordance with the desire of the members of the poet's family that some of his male descendants should continue to be known as Lowells.—Boston Herald.

EMINENT EDUCATOR DEAD.

PROF. F. A. WATERHOUSE PASSES AWAY ABROAD.

Prof. Francis A. Waterhouse, head master of the Boston English High school, died in Paris Saturday morning. He was a resident of this city.

Francis Ashbury Waterhouse, the head master of the Boston English High school, was born in Scarborough, Cumberland county, Me., Jan. 27, 1835. He attended the public schools of Hallowell, Me., his mother's native town, passing at an early age through the primary, grammar and high school grades.

On leaving the High school he went to sea for two years, learned how to "hand-reef and steer," had serious thoughts of following the sea for a livelihood, but finally gave up the idea and fitted for college at the Hallowell Academy, then under the charge of a Mr. Withington, a most thorough and stimulating teacher.

He entered Bowdoin College in 1853, graduated in 1857, and three years later received the degree of A. M. from that institution. While in college he was appointed college librarian for proficiency in modern languages received a "junior post" for general scholarship, was elected a member of the Phi Beta Kappa Society, and was one of the best scholars in college.

It was during his freshman year that he taught his first school. It was in a fishing village on the coast of Maine. It was a hard school, the main idea of the boys who attended being to bring on a conflict with the master, so as to have the pleasure of putting him out of the schoolhouse.

Mr. Waterhouse acquitted himself to the satisfaction of the district, and next year was asked to take the school again. Not long after graduation Mr. Waterhouse went South to teach in a boarding school near Natchez, Miss., where he held for a year the position of principal and mathematical teacher. At the end of a year he resigned the position to take that of tutor in a planter's family.

In the spring of 1859 he returned to Hallowell and took charge of the Hallowell academy. In the spring of 1861 he was elected principal of the Augusta High school, which office he held for seven years acceptably to the people of that city. This position he resigned in 1868 to take the principalship of the Newton High school, and continued in charge of this school until December, 1880, when he was elected head master of the English High school, Boston.

In a report of 1880 the school committee of Newton, speaking of the services of Mr. Waterhouse, observed: "It is but simple justice to say that he has made the school what it is, and that its present honorable reputation is largely due to him, and while his efforts have been most ably seconded by competent and faithful associates, none will be more ready than they to admit that his guiding mind has been felt through all, and his personal character impressed upon the school."

It was with many expressions of regret that the school committee and citizens of Newton parted with Prof. Waterhouse when he accepted the position in the Boston High school.

There is many a young man who has made and is making a reputation for himself in life who attributes no little share of his success to Prof. Waterhouse. His career as a teacher was from the beginning a notable one. He had a rare power of stimulating his classes to earnest and sustained effort in the pursuit of any study that interested him.

This power, when at his best, he no doubt exerted unconsciously, but in accordance with his theory of mental training—that the faculties of the mind are determined to their most improving exercise by the desire for knowledge, and that the ideal teacher is the one who has for his chief qualifications an intellectual thirst for knowledge and the power of exciting a like thirst in the mind of the pupil.

The sad news of his demise has been received with every evidence of profound sorrow in this city where he was loved by hundreds of former pupils and honored and respected by every one. His home was in Newtonville, not far from the High school of which he was the able and successful head for a number of years. A widow and two children survive him.

For the past year or two Mr. Waterhouse had not been in the best of health, and at the close of last year's school season he was granted a year's leave of absence. It was expected that a European trip would benefit him.

Editorial Comments.

To a great many of the active generation in Boston and vicinity, the death of Francis A. Waterhouse will convey as a personal loss. His work as head master of the Newton High school and of the Boys' English High school in this city covered a period of a quarter of a century; and this work, to one who held Mr. Waterhouse's views of the relations of teacher and pupil, means that he has left the impress of his own manly and earnest spirit upon the minds of many hundreds of young men.

Mr. Waterhouse had less of the formal pedagogic spirit than of the spirit of broad culture. While possessing administrative talent in large measure, it was his moral influence, his large sympathy, his practical good sense, that gave him the hold upon the affection of his pupils and made him one of the most successful of our educators.

His death is a loss to the public schools of Boston.—Boston Post.

A Sufficient Reason.

The admission of a stranger, who had moved into the vicinity but recently, into full membership in the church bothered Deacon Johnson very much. He disliked the man, and felt quite convinced he was not worthy to become a member, but he could make no definite charge against him. When the church session had the man's application under consideration, the deacon protested against his admission. When pressed to give his reasons he said, "Wal, pahson, de fac' ob de mattah is I feels dat he's a wolf in sheep's clothing."

"Dat's a hebbly charge, Brudder Johnson," said the parson. "W'y do yo t'ink so?"

"I dunno," but it 'pears to me he don't bleat jest like de rest ob de flock."—[Harper's Magazine for July.]

NEIGHBORHOOD CLUB'S FINALS.

PLAYS GREAT TENNIS, HOVEY DEFEATING HOBART AND CAPTURING FIRST PRIZE IN THE TOURNAMENT.

The Neighborhood Club Tennis tournament did not close Friday afternoon, as was expected, and the final match between Fred Hovey and Clarence Hobart was postponed until Saturday morning, after each man had won a set and the score was ten games all in the third set.

In the first part of the match, Friday, neither player put up a very stiff game. The first went to Hovey on Hobart's drives out of court. Hobart got the second by neat cross court drives and difficult returns. Hobart made some difficult drives, but he spoiled all his good plays by hitting out of court and into the net, and Hovey took two games in succession. Hobart now pulled himself together, and by clever cross-court work captured a love game, making the score 3-2 in favor of the Newton man.

A feature of Hovey's play cropped out in the next game; he failed on the easiest kind of balls, and Hobart succeeded in trying the score once more, three all. Up to this point neither player seemed to exert himself. It was plain ordinary tennis. Each man took a game, making the score four all. Hovey put a little more snap into his play, and won the set, 6-4, by taking the next two games. The score by games:

FIRST SET.
Hovey.....1 0 3 0 0 7 0 9 10-6
Hobart.....0 2 0 0 5 6 0 8 0 0-4

Hobart improved considerably in the second set and won four games in succession, apparently with a winning hand, when Hovey jumped in and took a love game with perfect ease. All he did was to place for Hobart, and the latter drove out of court. Hobart continued driving out of court, and Hovey soon had won four games in succession, trying the score at four all. Hobart was tired out by his hard work and Hovey allowed him to take a rest. When play was resumed Hobart suddenly braced up and won the next two games and the set, 8-6. Score by games:

SECOND SET.
Hobart.....1 2 3 4 0 0 0 10 12 13 14-8
Hovey.....0 0 0 0 6 7 8 9 0 11 0 0-6

Neither man had any marked advantage in the third set although early in the set Hovey led by two games. When 10 games all was reached play was stopped on account of darkness. Score by games:

THIRD SET.
Hobart.....1 0 0 0 5 6 0 8 9 0-5
Hovey.....0 2 3 4 0 0 7 0 10 10-5

The only chance Hobart, at the close Friday night of beating Hovey for first place, was to win two matches from him.

Both players started in fresh Saturday morning and put up a stiff game, Hovey being particularly aggressive.

The first game went to Hobart on Hovey's unlucky drives out of court.

Hovey later played a faultless net game and did some pretty placing, he took the next two games, making the score 2-1 in his favor. Hobart used his drop stroke to good advantage, and sent over some teasers that Hovey failed to find.

The game was Hobart's, and the score was tie at two games all. Hovey's beautiful all around work won him the next two games, making the score 4-2 in his favor.

Hovey ran up to the net and did some lively smashing and difficult placing.

In the next game Hobart drove out of court and gave the game to Hovey. All that Hovey wanted now was one game to win the set and match. Each man won a point until 30 all was reached, and then Hovey sent over a pretty back court drive that Hobart could not reach.

Hobart drove the next ball out of court, and the game, set and match were won by Hovey.

Hovey won the set 6-2. The score by games follows:

FOURTH SET.
Hobart.....1 0 0 4 0 0 0 0-2

Hovey won the match, 6-4, 6-8, 6-2. Hobart and Chace are tied for second place, each having won four matches and lost three. The prize will be divided between them.

Following is the standing of the players:

Player	Wins	Losses	Games Won	Games Lost
Hovey	1	1	12	6
Hobart	0	1	1	2
Chace	0	1	0	1

SUPT. SEEVER'S POPULARITY.

HE HAS A HOLD UPON THE AFFECTIONS OF BOSTON'S PUPILS.

When Supt. E. P. Seaver arose to speak at the closing exercises of the Boston grammar schools in Mechanics' Hall, last Saturday, there was a tremendous outburst of demonstration, which came and went in great waves, until he was obliged to hold up his hands for a cessation. This only added vigor to the applause to a prolonged degree.

At last the superintendent was given an opportunity to speak. He was evidently deeply impressed with the reception the graduates, joined by their friends, had accorded him. He said the few words he had to utter would come directly from his heart, for he could not restrain his feelings of pride as he stood there and presented to His Excellency, the Governor, to the mayor of Boston and to Alderman Hallstram this product of Boston's schools for the prosperous year of 1894.

Never, he continued, have the schools' work been more harmoniously and more effectively for the discharge of the duties which they are established to discharge.

He spoke of the good influence of the teachers, and cited instances where, in the later lives of their pupils, their words of advice had been beneficial in preserving moral character. He believed this would continue to be true with the graduates listening to him, and he hoped they would always appreciate many such words spoken to them by their teachers, and he closed with the wish that all such words might be in their lives "like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

NEWTON LADS IN TROUBLE.

CONCERNED IN SMALL BREAKS AND PUT UNDER HEAVY BONDS.

In the arrest of three boys, Sunday night, the Newton police believe they have broken up a gang which has been robbing stores of late in West Newton.

The three boys arrested at their homes by Officers J. J. Davis and Shannon were Gordon King, aged 16 years; Leonard Duncanson, aged 15 years, and his brother, Ralph Duncanson, aged 16 years.

The event that led up to the arrest was the robbery, shortly before 3 o'clock, Sunday afternoon, of the fruit store of A. Simione, later followed by a break in the same store about 10 o'clock in the evening.

The afternoon break was witnessed by a man who saw three boys make their exit from the rear part of the store upon Watertown street, and later he gave the information to the police. From the description furnished and from other knowledge the officers were led to make the arrest of King and the two Duncanson boys.

When taken to police headquarters they were subjected to an examination, which resulted in a confession. They admitted that they had not only broken into the fruit store, but that they had also broken into the restaurant of George W. Dearborn on June 1, and into the ice cream saloon of Rodney Q. Barlow June 24.

They further informed the officers that they were three of a gang which had its headquarters in a hut off Eddy street.

The goods taken from the fruit store of A. Simione amounted to $45 in value, and consisted of pipes, tobacco and fruit of various kinds. The boys stole from the ice cream saloon an ice cream freezer containing two gallons of the mixture. From the restaurant they had taken cigars and money.

Of the three boys arrested, King was interested in all of the mentioned breaks; Ralph Duncanson was interested in the breaks at Barlow's restaurant and Simione's fruit store, while his brother was only implicated, as far as the officers have as yet ascertained, in the break at Barlow's.

They were arraigned in court Monday morning and pleaded guilty to the charge of breaking and entering and larceny from a building. King was held in $1200, Ralph Duncanson in $800 and Leonard Duncanson in $400 for the grand jury.

The officers found some of the property stolen by the boys in the hut and in the lumber yard of H. H. Hunt.

ABOUT LAND FOR SCHOOL LOTS.

The city fathers had a lively session Monday evening and some pointed remarks were made relative to the public property committee's methods of transacting business. The subject was brought up by Alderman Plummer who informed the board that certain land desired for a schoolhouse location, for which an appropriation of $12,000 had been made, could be bought for about $2000 less. The statement was made when another order, relating to the provision of funds for plans for a schoolhouse, was being discussed.

The best time for presentation of facts, bearing upon the wisdom of expenditures, is when the particular plan calling for money is up for consideration. When an order is passed and there is a disposition to change front on the part of some of those who voted for it, there is likely to be a misunderstanding of the real intent of the later action which is like knocking a man down after he has been set firmly on his feet. It may be thought that the action rescinding the order was taken merely to secure a lower quotation for the land or it may be supposed that there was a cat in the meal somewhere.

The government of Newton is, fortunately, an honest one and the public property committee, undoubtedly, presented the lowest figures that they could secure for the lot desired. When the city wants land for any purpose, owners seldom put a low estimate of value on it. They want all they can get. There may be justice in investigating the figures quoted on the land which the alderman from Ward Four in substance says can be bought for less than $12,000, but it should have been done before the order passed.

Messrs. Knowles and Appleton, the owners of the land, deny that they ever quoted a price for it under 17 cents per foot and assert that Alderman Plummer was in error in supposing that it would be offered for any less. They assert that the price given to the public property committee was only consented to after repeated efforts and that two weeks was named as the limit of time to bind the bargain.

Much time was wasted Monday for the order has passed after all and the city must pay over the money for Messrs. Knowles & Appleton's land. The order passed the aldermen Monday evening and the common council concurred. After Alderman Plummer's statement, it was rescinded by the aldermen pending an investigation when the paper was not in the possession of the board. The action is illegal and a vote to rescind cannot be made anyway following the passage of the order by both branches unless formal notice is given of the intent. City Solicitor Slocum holds that view and says that the order becomes operative, if the Mayor signs it, the vote to rescind notwithstanding. The legal phases will offer some interest, at all events, which will bring out various opinions and keep the matter alive for a time in the public mind.

MEIG'S BILL SIGNED.

Gov. Greenhalge signed the Meigs bill Monday afternoon at 4:28 o'clock and the Boynton bicycle railway bill was signed a few minutes later. Hearings were given to parties who desired to protest against the signing of the Meigs bill. Among the objectors were Causten Browne, representing the Citizens Association; John D. Long and Henry D. Hyde, representing the West End Street Railway Company and Andrew J. Bailey, the city of Boston.

A step, at least, has been accomplished in the way of providing rapid transit for the Hub and its suburbs. The business men very generally object to the elevated railway scheme, and regard it as unsuited in every way for Boston's narrow streets. The money interests take that ground. The clerks and that class of employees, who are obliged to find homes outside of the heart of the city are inclined to favor most any plan looking toward rapid transit, be it such as proposed by the Meigs's system, through the adoption of the single overhead track or by the underground method. Some relief must be afforded for the congested districts of Boston and a plan that will successfully do that with the least objection in the way of unsightly structures and with a view to safety, will naturally receive the largest support and encouragement. Those who have studied this question are not as a rule favorable to an elevated system after the type of the Meigs. There are a great many people who see merit in the single or bicycle track scheme, because the greater the speed the greater the safety. It certainly has points of advantage that are worthy of careful investigation.

SOME men are anxious to overturn governments and society, and some foolish people show resentment quite often upon the slightest sort of provocation. A crowd of young men who can be safely enumerated in the latter class conceived the scheme of showing their disgust of the restrictive order which prohibited the setting off of fireworks and the usual noisy demonstrations until after 3 a. m. Independence Day. They went up over Brighton Hill and yelled like fiends in front of Alderman Bothfield's residence, waking up that gentleman, and in fact all the residents thereabouts. Their racket was short lived, for the regulars and specials were attending to their duty and dispersed the would-be rioters. A pile of rotten eggs was found in a retired spot on the "hill," intended, probably, for ammunition provided those aroused from slumber ventured out to investigate the nature of the disturbance.

Boys in the belfry in the First Congregational church, Newton Centre, fooled the special police on the Fourth. Shortly after midnight, they began to toll the bell and it was rung at intervals for 25 minutes. The officers fastened the trap so that the youths could not come down through the church and they guarded the exterior. The idea was to keep the mischievous lads in the belfry until the dawn of day, but like many another good intention it failed to materialize. The boys got out of their predicament all right, how no one seems to be able to explain, but when the officers got about ready to make them prisoners, they discovered that they had departed, leaving no address and nothing to serve for purposes of identification.

PROF. WATERHOUSE will live long in the memory of his Newton pupils. He was a man of broad culture and large sympathies who won the love and confidence of his boys. His success as a teacher was attributable as much to his charm of manner and power to win his way into the hearts as to his scholarly attainment. Yet, he was a good disciplinarian, accomplishing by kindness and a perfect understanding of the make-up of those under his charge what others fail to attain through more vigorous methods.

It was a very quiet and orderly Fourth. Independence Day was ushered in with less noise than usual, for the regulation regarding the popping off of fire crackers, pistols and the like kept young America, represented in this locality, in check until after 3 a. m. It was a good thing, for many a tired person enjoyed comforting and refreshing slumber till toward dawn, at least, when the youth and some older persons began to get in their work.

EVERY nation says the Herald has its great patriotic days, set apart in recognition of the national existence and wrought into the thought and feeling of the people. The Fourth of July, 1776, from the first was an event that expressed the hopes and purposes and aspirations of the American people, and the spirit of that day still lives and moves and has its being in the life of the people.

PREPARATIONS are being made by many of our good citizens for a departure to seashore and mountain resorts.

"NEWTON, the ideal home of athletes," is the theme of a very interesting illustrated article in the Herald this morning.

The General Court of 1894 was prorogued at 7:20 o'clock Monday evening.

An Armenian Legend.

Ararat, one of the most majestic mountains in the world, rises 17,000 feet above the vast flat plain which bears its name and reigns over the surrounding mountains. Early in the morning, while all the valleys of Ararat and the neighboring mountains are buried in shadow, the white top of the Scriptural mountain gleams beautiful in the first beams of the sun.

The Armenian people tell this story about the inhabitants of Pharbee:

Once the devil and a Pharbee man laid a wager as to which should first see the sun. The one who saw it first was to box the other's ears. "Very well," said the Armenian, and he lay down and slept sweetly, while the devil, itching to punish his enemy, stood looking eastward, and with eager eyes watched the whole night for the sunrise. Early in the morning, the Pharbee man rose, and pointing to the top of Ararat, which was already shining in the sun, cried joyfully, "I see it!" The devil was vanquished. The Pharbee man, with his strong hand, boxed the devil's ears. Ever since that time, the devil has been afraid of the people of the Armenian village of Pharbee.—Woman's Journal.

A Gotham Incident.

A scene that attracted a crowd occurred in the Bowers very early one morning. A girl not over 20 years old, many of whose natural beauties of face could be distinguished through her tears, sat on a doorstep of a saloon. She was well dressed. A group stood watching her, and while some of them inquired sympathetically why she seemed so distressed a young man wearing the customary poke bonnet of the Salvation Army edged her way through the crowd, and catching sight of the wayward girl went up to her. The Salvationist, resting upon one knee on the stone step, threw her right arm over the shoulder of the weeping girl, and taking her by the hand drew her close to her and began talking to her earnestly in a tone too low to be heard by the bystanders. The utmost quiet prevailed, although the crowd soon numbered several hundred. After a little while the girl was noticed to have ceased crying. She brightened up, and the blinding moisture disappeared from her eyes. A smile took the place of the drawn look on her face, and she clung closely to her comforter. She finally arose, embraced the Salvationist warmly, and they both started up toward Third avenue, the arm of the Salvation Army lass intertwined around the waist of her apparently reclaimed sister. The crowd silently dispersed.—New York Sun.

English Homes and Americans.

On entering an Englishman's house the first thing one notices is how well his house is adapted to him. On entering an American's house the first thing one notices is how well he adapts himself to his house. In England the establishment is carried on with a prime view to the comfort of the woman. In America the establishment is carried on with a prime view to the comfort of the woman. Men are more selfish than women; consequently the English home is, as a rule, more comfortable than the American home.

An Englishman is continually going home, an American is continually going to business. One is forever planning and scheming to get home, and to stay home, and to enjoy the privileges of home, while the other is more apt to devote his energies to make his business a place to go to and in which to spend himself. These minor details of domestic life put their impress upon larger matters of business and politics.—Price Collier in Forum.

A Fable.

A swallow flew down and plucked a small piece of wool from the back of a sheep. The sheep was very indignant and denounced the swallow in scathing terms.

"Why do you make such a fuss?" asked the swallow. "You never say anything when the shepherd takes all the wool you have on your back."

"That's a different thing entirely," replied the sheep. "If you knew how to take any wool without hurting me as the shepherd does, I would not object so much."

This fable is merely intended to explain why millions can be stolen with impunity, while the theft of a pair of boots or a loaf of bread is punished with such severity.—Texas Sittings.

—Residents of Otis street enjoyed their usual Fourth of July celebration Wednesday evening, keeping open house and uniting in a fire works display. Bird, H. D. Kingsbury, W. P. Lunt, B. T. Wells, Chas. Curtis and George W. Pope.

—A very successful operetta under the management of several Newtonville young ladies, was given Saturday, June 30th, at the residence of Miss Carrie Curtis, Otis street, for the benefit of the Williston Home. There were a large attendance of Newtonville people present and the young ladies realized between eleven and twelve dollars.

—It was a quiet Fourth here and very little of the noisy demonstration of previous years was in evidence. The destruction of property which was a feature last year, representing the work of some lawless individuals, was fortunately not repeated. There was some pulling down of gates and the like and a fountain with two figures of a boy and girl on the estate of Mr. Rollins, corner of Otis and Walnut streets, was besmeared with paint. Several fire alarm boxes were visited by the knights of the brush and made to appear anything but attractive.

—Mr. A. J. Silberstein, formerly of New York City, who recently leased the Smead house on Court street, had a very fine display of fireworks, July 4th, surpassing that of any private exhibition in the city. There was a day display and a brilliant array of pyrotechnics in the evening, lasting two hours and affording entertainment for several hundred spectators. Hundreds of rockets and set pieces were set off and the finale was that of the explosion of a bomb which sent myriads of balls and circling streaks of colored fire high into the heavens and disclosed to view finally a —Miss Alice Duff Hall of Portsmouth and Mr. H. E. Sisson of this place, were married at the bride's home last Thursday, Rev. J. Sturges Pierce officiating. A reception was held at its close the couple departed on their wedding tour. They will reside here upon their return.

—Mrs. William Leonard of Eddy street celebrated her 84th birthday, Thursday, by holding a reception from 2 until 5 o'clock. The occasion was a great success and many friends called to offer congratulations. The guests after being presented to the aged lady and receiving her kindly welcome were escorted to the dining room where a collation was served.

—The night preceding the Fourth here was the most quiet in many years. There were no disturbances, very little drunkenness and few depredations. There were 49 special officers besides the regular force of patrolmen on duty in various parts of the city. At Nonantum, an incident was the burning of a hay stack. A more serious affair there was the assaulting of Special Officer Sullivan by a gang of toughs. He was pretty well used up and was severely wounded. Besides these events, the tearing down of a section of stone wall on Cross street, there were no other cases of consequence reported of disorderly acts.

—The invitation tennis tournament of the Neighborhood Club was a great success. An account of the contest was given elsewhere. The former won first place and played brilliantly in most of the games in which he met strong competitors. Thousands of lovers of the sport have derived a vast amount of pleasure in witnessing the contests between some of the best amateur players in the country. The Neighborhood Club has done a great deal to encourage the sport during the past few years and has provided excellent accommodations for spectators who are not called upon to contribute a cent toward the expense. Tickets are distributed free by members. They were in great demand Saturday when the deciding match between Hovey and Hobart was on. The audiences throughout the tourney have been made up of the best people of the Newtons and surrounding places, and the ladies as usual have been present in large numbers.

—The public property committee of the city government had been acquainted with the fact of the unsafe condition of the two school houses mentioned. The inspector of buildings had (I understand been notified); why then do these officials wait for the school board to emphasize the fact, that these buildings are in their present state veritable "fire traps." Gentlemen whose duty it is to look after public property attend to this matter.

—The conditions of these buildings violate all modern laws of safety. Now during the vacation season, put these school houses in as good condition as possible, and adopt all approved known appliances for prevention of fire. The thanks of the parents are due the member of the school board who has been instrumental in showing how unsafe these buildings are at present, and the danger to which our children are exposed in event of fire. Now let the proper officials act.

THE PLANET URANUS.

Some Interesting Things a Voyage to the Gigantic World Would Disclose.

If Uranus, which is a star of about the sixth magnitude, were a planet like those little ones called asteroids, which are being discovered by the dozen every year, it could not have much claim upon popular attention. But Uranus is really a gigantic world, more than 60 times as large as ours. Its vast distance, now about 1,700,000,000 miles from the earth, is what causes it to look so small.

Uranus has four moons, which revolve backward in their orbits—that is to say, they revolve from east to west around Uranus, while Uranus goes, like all the other planets, from west to east around the sun. It is believed that Uranus rotates backward on its axis also. Moreover, the axis of that great, strange globe lies in such a direction that in the course of its year, which is equal to 84 of our years, the sun shines almost perpendicularly first upon one pole and then upon the other. Measured by our time standard, there are 40 years of constant daylight, followed by 40 years of unbroken night, around the poles of Uranus. And the sun rises in the west and sets in the east there. But the sun looks very small when viewed from Uranus—only one four-hundredth as large as it appears to us. Still it sheds upon that planet 1,500 times as much light as the full moon sends to the earth, so that daylight upon Uranus, while faint compared with the blaze of a terrestrial noonday, is nevertheless a very respectable kind of illumination.

It is a pity that the telescope is able to show us very little of the detail of the surface of Uranus. Some faint bands or belts, just visible with the most powerful instruments, are all that can be made out. If we could visit Uranus, we should probably be greatly surprised, if not greatly disappointed. Its average density is but a trifle in excess of that of water, and of course its surface density is far less.

A voyager from the earth landing on Uranus would probably sink almost as rapidly as if he had leaped upon one of those round white thunderclouds which, piled high in air, look so solid and snowy cool on a July afternoon. He could no more walk on the surface of that world than he could walk on water.

It has generally been assumed that the meaning of the slight density of Uranus is that that planet is still in a vaporous or liquid condition and exceedingly hot perhaps. If so, it may in the course of future ages contract and condense and cool until it comes into a condition resembling the earth's. Will vital forces then become active upon it and produce a long succession of living species, brightening its dim daylight with the color of flowers and the ceaseless activity of animate existence? It is not likely that man will ever be able to answer that question, but who that looks upon Uranus keeping step with the earth to the music of the sun can help asking it?—Garrett P. Serviss in New York Sun.

Jangling Piano Strings.

Another case occurred in a house where I was once stopping in Nova Scotia. A piano with a bad note was fixed by simply opening an inside shutter of a bay window at the opposite side of a parlor from the piano. The latch of one shutter was lightly resting against the edge of another and caused the jangle when one particular note was struck. The lady player had previously declared that she would send for a tuner the next day and laughed at my attempt to fix it by hunting about the room while she pounded. However, she did not conceal her surprise when the trouble was removed and admitted that there was something about this sound business that she did not quite understand.

In regard to locating these jangles, however, I will say that it is not always so easy. It requires some practice before the ear becomes capable of locating with any degree of success the direction of sounds of this kind. This was my experience with the first piano jangle, that of the cracked globe, which was quite difficult. That of the window shutter was easier as well as many others which I have located since. A correct musical ear is also an important adjunct in the case.—A. A. Knudson in Popular Science Monthly.

Birch Bark Shoes.

Shoes and other articles besides baskets and cabinets are manufactured from birch bark by the Russian peasantry. The bark from which these articles are made is from the inner skin of the Russian birch tree, common in almost all parts of the empire. It is gathered in spring and fall, and the process is a very simple one. An incision is first made around the trunk of the tree, and the peasants have a knack of tearing or unwinding the bark from the starting point, which gives them a strip of even width that they wind into a ball and keep through the winter until it is dry enough to use. It is then made into shoes, baskets and other useful articles. The barks shoes are universally worn by the Russian peasantry. Other shoes used in winter are made of sheep's wool. These are manufactured by itinerant cobbler who travel from house to house, using the peasants' own materials.—Philadelphia Ledger.

THE ARTIST'S QUEEN.

An artist once gave to the canvas a face
That the wise came miles to see.
A lovelight glowed in eyes and a-dance
He had caught in his subtlety.

He had given a crown to the regal one
And knights at her command,
But the girl-like mien was not of a queen,
Though courtiers kissed her hand.

And the critics said, as they gazed enrapt,
That the rank of a queen was not there,
Though there never was such grace
Or a face more delicate, fair.

And they hid to the artist and found that he
Was in quarters poor and bare,
But he held to his heart the counterpart
Of a rustic maiden there.

—Detroit Free Press.

THE LESSON OF LOVE.

"Yann!"

"Excellency."

"Here."

With bowed head and drawing one foot after the other slowly along the ground as if to show great humility, the favorite huntsman of Prince Horostienko entered the arbor where his illustrious master was wont to repose after eating.

"Approach, son of a dog, and listen."

Yann Barsouk came nearer and bent forward until his face touched his master's boot.

"Are you always sure of your hand and your sight?"

"God help me, yes, excellency."

"Well, you are to wander away from the castle, as is your habit. You must pretend to have lost your way. At nightfall enter the garden secretly, and jumping the hedge conceal yourself in yonder clump of bushes, which is directly in front of the window of the blue salon."

"Yes, excellency."

"The salon is sure to be lighted. There you will see the princess and Count Alexis Karagine. Watch well. When you see me enter the room, raise your gun and aim at the count."

Drawn up in his rustic chair, his face more wrinkled and distorted than ever before, the old prince spoke authoritatively. His gaze was intently fixed upon his huntsman, in whose features no other sentiment was discernible save that of servile obedience. He continued:

"Aim at the count, but do not shoot at once. Before you blow out his brains I wish to make him understand that he is to die."

"Yes, excellency."

"Therefore, you will stand, your finger on the trigger, until I fall a handkerchief which I shall carry in my hand. Then, Yann, shoot and hit your mark. You understand?"

"Go."

Yann was more than a man—he was a brute. Whence he came no one knew. From Lithuania perhaps, judging from his name—the only words he could speak when they found him, a tiny babe, under a bush on the highroad that crossed Prince Horostienko's estates. They left him to grow up in the courtyard among the servants and grooms. For his daily nourishment he depended upon the charity of the peasants and the scullions.

At 16 he had made a bow, with which he could bring down all the apples and pears he wanted. Never once did he miss his aim.

One day the prince saw Yann's arrow pierce the blossom of a bergamot tree, and he commanded him to be brought before him. The servant who led Yann to his excellency trembled. But his excellency was in good humor. He contented himself with giving the culprit 15 lashes, after which he was sent to the head huntsman, with orders that he was to have a uniform and a gun.

Yann retained an agreeable remembrance of his master's clemency. He wished to show that he was grateful. Besides shooting was his ruling passion.

His skill surpassed that of all the most renowned marksmen of his time. At 40 paces he could send a bullet directly through the eye of an otter without the slightest injury to the fur. Then he would silently deposit the dead beast at his master's feet. Being repaid with a simple "Well done," Yann would return to his thatched hut, surly and taciturn, without even a glance at the group of maidens, who, with petticoats daintily tucked up, washed their linen in the river.

He never spoke to any one. The peasants held him in awe. Evil stories were current about him. They may have been true. For Yann there was but one law—the word of his master; and one love—that for his gun.

When the evening tea had been drunk, the prince, making a pretext of having some orders to give, took leave of the count, his only guest that day, and having kissed his wife's hand withdrew to his own apartment.

A half hour later he went down into the garden.

There everything spoke of love. Oppressed by the heat of the day, the plants and flowers had blossomed once more into life, filling the air with their heavy fragrance. The fireflies floated like bright emeralds on the night breeze to where their mates awaited them under the thick leaves. In the grass the crickets sang softly to their love mates of an hour.

The prince took a circuitous route and returned on the grass, so that his footsteps might not be heard. Drawing aside the heavy leaves of an elder tree: "Are you there? Very well. Remember the signal, and fire at once! In the count's eye, Yann—like the otter's."

"Yes, excellency."

Certainly the poor princess had struggled conscientiously to resist the ardent supplications of Alexis Petrovitch. But he was 25, and she was only 20.

The grave carresses of her husband suggested to the princess what the infinite joys of young love might be, with its divine intoxication, its ardent embraces. Never yet had she given her lips unasked to her husband. Must she always submit to his almost paternal kiss?

es? And what promises she read in the eyes of Alexis!

The princess did not stop to analyze either her preferences or her aversion. She loved Alexis; that was enough. Love at 20 has a spark of divinity in it. It does not even care to understand itself.

One day Alexis swore to the princess that he would only put his lips to the hem of her gown, but carried on by the torrent of his youthful love he kissed her passionately. She fled to her favorite blue salon, which she never allowed any one to enter. There she permitted the count to join her.

After that they sat there whenever they were alone together.

So it was that, seated on a divan opposite the long window, the princess saw kneeling before her him who was not yet her lover, but to whom she felt already that she entirely belonged.

"Ah, my life, how I love you!" he was saying.

His arms were about her. Drawing her closer to him, he sought her lips. She was uneasy and made as if she would release herself, when, suddenly conquered by the convulsion which rent her heart, she closed her eyes, and her lips met his.

Yann Barsouk watched. Before those two young creatures rapt in an ecstasy of love he smiled.

This love, what was it? A pit into which man led woman, and she ran to it blindly, careless of her fate.

Yann understood this love. No one could imitate as he could the moaning love lamentations of the otter to his mate. How many had he shot, to save them from their "doom," as he expressed it.

Meanwhile, his eyes fixed on the count, Yann silently leveled his carbine.

Inflamed by the long, voluptuous embrace and moved by the strength of his passion, Alexis arose. Little by little he pressed closer against him the slight form lying so unresistingly in his arms. With his impatient fingers he tore aside the silk folds of her gown.

But the princess stood erect. The adorable modesty of her gesture, the look of amazement in her eyes, accompanied by so much love, so much fear, reminded Alexis of his promise. Falling once more upon his knees, respectfully, reverently, he laid his lips to the hem of her gown.

Barsouk saw all, even the look of mad passion with which the princess thanked Alexis, unconsciously promising to repay him a hundredfold for the sacrifice she now imposed on him.

A veil was suddenly torn away from the soul of the brute. His savage nature was electrified by the ray of understanding which penetrated his very heart. It was a new idea—exquisite, elevating—that of woman's modesty.

Now he understood pure love.

As Alexis rose from his knees the prince entered. Certain of satiating his hatred, gloating over the horror into which his unexpected entrance had thrown them, the prince advanced deliberately toward the lovers, who stood trembling before him. He went cautiously, like a caterpillar creeping under the petals of a flower.

Alexis threw himself in front of the princess. But quickly disengaging herself the woman boldly confessed all. Then, with a superb audacity, she stood staring in her husband's face.

Old Horostienko was beside himself with rage. Grasping the handkerchief which was to serve as signal to Barsouk, he threw it with the force of a blow in his wife's face.

Surprised to see the count still erect, he turned toward the window—and fell, shot through the eye.

Like the otter!—Translated for San Francisco Argonaut from the Russian.

An African King's Family.

The following is an extract from a letter written by a French lady in Senegal and published in a Paris newspaper, referring to a visit to King Behazin of Dahomey, on board the Second:

"The king, followed by five wives and four children, of whom one is a handsome boy, then came forward in a silk mantle striped with black and blue and elegantly draped. His head was bare, and he had on his feet sandals held on by crossed bands embroidered in wools of many colors. He smoked a large ebony pipe, the bowl and shank of which were circled with silver. His French is limited to bon jour and ami, and I am the first white woman he ever saw, and the sight of me astonished him. He at first gazed at me, then roared with laughter, and when he had roared till he was tired looked around and asked where my husband was. The interpreter having pointed him out, he took him by the shoulder and gave him a friendly shake, which was as much as to say, 'What a lucky fellow you are!' One of the five wives cooks. She has lost all her teeth. The others stand around the deposited child. The children are very nice. Behazin is elderly, about 55, and has a white head of hair. He hardly knows how to walk, because on account of his rank he has always been carried."

The Queen Yields.

Even the queen felt herself obliged to yield to the storm of protests aroused by limiting the attendance at the annual drawing rooms. Instead, however, of admitting the usual crush at each occasion, she decided to give a special reception in the latter part of May, to which 200 who were unable to obtain places on the first lists will be admitted. Several American debutantes will profit by the arrangement.—London Letter.

The Way of the Finest.

Jasper—Most policemen go on the theory that a man they arrest should be treated like a bottle of medicine.

Jumpup—How is that?

Jasper—He should be "well shaken before taken."—New York Herald.

Paid For It.

Clerk—The gent in No. 116 says the rain leaked down on his bed last night and soaked him to the skin.

Proprietor—Charge one bath (half a crown) in his bill.—London Tit-Bits.

The Moose Made Quick Time.

"Any one who thinks a moose can't travel at a pretty lively gait is very much mistaken," remarked George T. Horton of St. Paul. "I used to be a locomotive engineer up in the northern part of my state, and one day I had an opportunity to test the speed of this animal. I was running a light freight train, and in coming around a curve saw a big moose standing directly on the track. As soon as the animal saw the engine he took to his heels right down the path between the rails. For about four miles we had a perfectly straight track, and as I had heard of the great speed of this animal I determined to test its ability. The gait of the moose was a sort of trot, such only as a moose can exhibit, his paces being about two rods in length. At first it was only a little jog, but as the engine began to gain speed the moose let himself out. Faster and faster sped the engine, but still the frightened moose trotted in the van, and all the mysterious power of steam could not prevail upon this monarch of the forest. At last after we had covered the four miles, turning a curve, we came upon a gang of section hands who were fixing the track. The sight of these men frightened the moose from the track, and he was soon lost to view in the forest."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Quick Transit.

"Did yer ever stop ter think," said Meandering Mike, "bout this world's turning on its axis once every 24 hours?"

"Course I have," said Flooding Pete.

"It's mighty fast travel, so fast that it don't seem with while tryin ter improve on it. Er feller that ain't contented ter jes' sit down an slide with the earth at that rate of speed is so dogged hard ter satisfy that his opinion ain't wuth less'n to now."—Washington Star.

HEALTHY EXERCISE

—fresh air and proper food, help to keep a woman in good condition. It is insufficient for some, weakened or borne down as they are by the ailments and irregularities peculiar to their sex.

They're easily helped, though; there's a remedy in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription—that will build up and cure every enfeebled woman. It's the prescription of a physician; has been tested in thousands of cases, and never found wanting.

The only risk that's taken is that of the manufacturers who promise to refund the money if no benefit is experienced.

This "Prescription" reaches the origin of the trouble. Dizziness, fainting spells, and nervous disorders, such as sleeplessness, chorea or St. Vitus's dance, depend upon the irregularities and displacements of the special structures, the "Prescription" cures by regulating and correcting these functions and organic changes.

until 11 o'clock the handsome window was inspected by hundreds of ladies and gentlemen who kept coming and going in a constant stream, and not only did the beautiful fittings and decorations receive un-followed almost immediately by one from box 13. Both were for a fire in the house on Mill street occupied by Cornelius Murphy. The fire was caused by fire crackers and the damage was not large.

—The night preceding the Fourth was conspicuously quiet, the only fire issued from police headquarters and the presence of a number of special officers doing their part toward such a result. But there were some active parties about and a few minutes after midnight the bell of the First church began to toll, awakening many residents in its vicinity. Officers hastened to the spot and finally located the trouble in the belfry, but when they attempted to reach the perpetrators the door was closed down and resisted every effort of their's to raise it. They contented themselves in fastening it down on their side and instituted a watch before the door.
That the perpetrators were a party of boys, who closed the door, or rather boy in the belfry pulled up the rope and attempted to escape outside, but the presence of special officers spoiled this maneuver.
The place was finally left in charge of some of the special officers to keep the boy trapped until morning, but when morning came the belfry was empty, to the intense surprise of those on guard. There were other interesting features during the night,
but no wanton depredations such as characterized the holiday of a year ago.

—The observance of July Fourth as arranged very quietly under the auspices of the Newton Centre Improvement Associa-

and was highly successful. The program was complete and embraced a large variety

certs and fireworks, the baseball game of the N. A. A. vs the Rindge A. A. in which the former won first place in the Suburban

THE INDIAN EMPIRE

INTERESTING COMMENTS BY AN OB-SERVING TRAVELER.

The Past and Future of a Great Country and Remarkable People—Made Poor by the Spoilation of Foreigners—English Language Coming Into General Use.

We have traveled more than 2,500 miles in India, have seen its grandest scenery, its largest and most interesting cities, its most fertile and some of its desert regions. We have found in Delhi, Agra, Benares, Ambar and Ah-madabad the best examples of Hindoo and Mohammedan architecture. Of course there is much we have not seen.
The Dravidical temples of the south of India, remarkable for their size and elaborate decorations, best illustrated at Tanjore and Madura, we can only judge by small specimens seen at Madras and Pondicherry. The wonderful cave temples at Ellora, Ajunta and many other places we have got a fair conception of from that of Elephanta. One could spend years exploring India without exhausting its layers of civilization. We have endeavored to intelligently study,
by observation and reading en route,
the ethnology, sociology and theology of the country. We have missed no opportunity to talk with British officials and educated natives. We have looked into the work of the missionaries and come to the conclusion that they are doing a great deal of good, though not exactly in the way it is popularly understood at home. I think I may say that our travels in India have materially broadened our views of Asiatic history.
Especially have we been impressed with the spectacle of an empire of 240,000, 000 people of different races and religions, governed by a handful of Europeans, and in the main well governed, with a large measure of liberty, as perfect protection of life and property as is provided in the most civilized countries of Europe and increasing means of education. The universities and colleges scattered over India are turning out annually thousands of educated natives.

It is a curious fact that the Indian who speaks English speaks it without accent and rather better than the average of English or Americans. Nearly all of the schools above the primary grade teach English, and in the majority of them it is the medium of education. More than half of the native newspapers and periodicals, which are numerous and well conducted, are printed in English.

I do not think it a wild prediction that English will be essentially the language of India a hundred years hence.
It is curious to contemplate what will be the political result of the education of the Indian people. Will they be content, especially those of the Aryan race, capable of high development, with the shadow of a government which is sometimes driven to its wits' ends with its own domestic problems, in a group of little islands 5,000 miles away? For the present I can scarcely conceive of a greater calamity for India than the failure of Great Britain to hold and govern the country. It would be the signal for anarchy, which would entail the destruction of the people and seriously obstruct the onward march of human progress.

India is a poor country. Its fabulous wealth has been carried off by conquerors or gathered into colossal fortunes by the few rich. The great body of the people are miserably poor. They barely keep body and soul together and do not store up any vital force to resist disease.
The failure of one crop entails widespread distress. The failure of two in succession means famine for millions.
The government is doing something to improve the conditions. In the last five years canals have been built, increasing the area under irrigation about 25 per cent. How much advantage the tiller of the soil gets from these improvements I do not know. The government costs too much, and the people are taxed to the limit of endurance. The British India civil service is called the best in the world. It is undoubtedly the most expensive. It costs $11,000,000 ($55,- 000,000) a year. The civil servant serves in various capacities, from a clerk to a lieutenant governor, for 25 years, four of which are given for holidays, and retires with a minimum pension of $1,000 per annum. The cost of all this comes out of the Indian people, and their superstitions and customs rob them
of a part of what is left.

There are grave problems in India and more to come, and to solve them will require all the talent which can be secured. It is doubtful whether the merchants of London, the manufacturers of Manchester or the hereditary aristocrats who are sent to hold vice regal courts in Calcutta will solve them in the interest of the people of India, who are today about the poorest fed, clothed and housed people on earth. Yet I cannot but think that these people are capable of great things in the future if they can be properly nourished and educated.
Their bright, distinctly Aryan faces look out appealingly through surroundings of squalor and superstition and give promise of high development under favorable conditions. Indeed we see splendid specimens of manhood among them today, and their graceful courtesy shames our ruder manners.—Cor. Boston Herald.

Serving Toast.

Dry toast should be served directly from the toaster. When this is not practical, pile it on a heated bread plate, cover it with a napkin and put it on the hearth or in the oven. Toast is given in all slight attacks of sickness because it is so easily digested. The more thorough the conversion of the starch the more easily and perfectly the system will manage it, for the change of starch into dextrine by the action of heat is simply doing outside of the body what takes place in it, in the ordinary course of digestion, by the action of the digestive fluids. Therefore when this is accomplished by artificial means nature is spared so much energy.—Philadelphia Times.

HOME OF THE ORANG.

Scenes Witnessed In Borneo, Where These Animals Are Most Plentiful.

The great island of Borneo is the home of the orang, and one of the most noticeable features of the landscape is the nests of the orang, which are scattered about thickly among the tall trees.
From their number one might get a greatly exaggerated impression of the plentifulness of the species unless it were understood how and for what purpose these roosting places were constructed. The apes are greatly annoyed by flies, from which they are able to protect the front part of their bodies with their hands, but they cannot keep the vicious insects from biting them in the rear, and so they gather a quantity of leaves and branches and make them into couches to repose against among the boughs.

A protection of this sort serves very well for awhile, but presently its material begins to decompose, and the decaying leaves attract the flies which the orang is so anxious to get rid of. Then he is obliged to make another nest of fresh stuff, and so he may require a dozen of them in the course of the year.
Inasmuch as he does not take the trouble to remove the old one they remain to adorn the tree top in which he swings about. Orangs have a curious method of fighting. In their conflict among themselves, which are frequent, their effort is always to seize the fingers of their adversaries and bite them.

It is owing to this method of battle that it is almost impossible to procure a skin which does not lack some of the fingers. If defending itself against a man, the orang will always attempt to grasp the arms of his human opponent, so as to chew off his fingers. For this purpose its jaws are excellently adapted, being enormously powerful and equipped with huge incisors.

To protect itself from the rain the orang crouches its arms over its head. The hair on the orang's upper arm points downward, the apparent purpose being to shed the rain like a thatch when the attitude thus described is assumed.—

The Moose Made Quick Time.

"Any one who thinks a moose can't travel at a pretty lively gait is very much mistaken," remarked George T.
Horton of St. Paul. "I used to be a locomotive engineer up in the northern part of my state, and one day I had an opportunity to test the speed of this animal. I was running a light freight train, and in coming around a curve saw a big moose standing directly on the track. As soon as the animal saw the engine he took to his heels right down the path between the rails. For about four miles we had a perfectly straight track, and as I had heard of the great speed of this animal I determined to test its ability. The gait of the moose was a sort of trot, such only as a moose can exhibit, his paces being about two rods in length. At first it was only a little jog, but as the engine began to gain speed the moose let himself out.
Faster and faster sped the engine, but still the frightened moose trotted in the van, and all the mysterious power of steam could not prevail upon this monarch of the forest. At last after we had covered the four miles, turning a curve,
we came upon a gang of section hands who were fixing the track. The sight of these men frightened the moose from the track, and he was soon lost to view in the forest."—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

past two years has been located on the old White estate, Watertown street, was closed this week. Dr. J. T. Freeman, who has been in charge, has returned to his home in Toronto, Canada, and all the effects of the institution have been sent to the parent home at Newport, R. I. There have been only four or five patients the last few months, and the remaining two were sent to Newport, R. I.

—The Nonantum Industrial school began its fifth annual session Monday in Abenenum hall, having about one hundred pupils.
The school is conducted under the auspices of the Eliot church society, and comprises carpenter, sewing and cooking classes,
under the tutelage of competent teachers.
The carpenter class is the largest, about eighty applications being received for entrance to this department, all of whom could not be accommodated. The other classes have about thirty pupils each. The school is continued through the summer months, closing the last week in August.

—At the annual meeting of the North Evangelical church, Monday evening, some discussion relative to the erection of a pasonage resulted in a postponement to a future special meeting. The church purchased 32,000 feet of land, facing Bridge street, in the fall of 1893, and has already decided to build a parsonage to cost $3000,
the discussion being as to when it should be commenced. These officers were elected: Fred Freary, W. E. Lowry, church committee; G. A. Worth, clerk and treasurer; A. K. Worth, Reuben Fornhall, des-cons.

—Two successful liquor raids were made Saturday evening, one of which disclosed a neat hiding place for the ardent. Sergt.
Ryan accompanied by Officers J. W. Conroy and Tappin, raided the premises of John Kelly on Bridge street. The family appeared unconcerned about the movements of the searching party until one of the party, who was upon the second floor, happened to move two long strips of carpet that covered the floor. By sounding the floor a loose board was discovered. This was lifted from its resting place, and neatly resting between the floor and the lower ceiling were found 50 bottles of lager beer.
At the same time Officers C. O. Davis, Mallon and Soule raided the dwelling house of Mary Travis, on Bottle alley, off Bridge street, and secured one-half barrel of ale,

a case of lager and other liquor.

an interruption, but resulting in no serious damage.

—The house recently built by Mr. D. M.

but will continue to be occupied by Mr. Spooner. The sale was negotiated by Wiley S. and Frank Edmunds.

—The Y. M. C. A. rooms are closed for a month, the general secretary having left town for that time. The members of the association are complaining, and see no reason why a substitute could not have been engaged.

—The choir boys of Grace church will give a concert, as usual, at Cohasset,

regular features of the choir and is much enjoyed by the boys, who remain at Scituate

the beach.

—Mr. Peter S. White has opened an block, where orders for the cleaning and laying of carpets will be received. Mr.

White is in company with his years and now starts in business for himself.

—The Inebriates' home on Watertown street was entered Tuesday afternoon it is supposed by boys who stole about 30 feet of lead pipe and about the same quantity of brass pipe. They found some boxes containing spices in the kitchen and mixed them with water, forming a paste which was made use of in besmearing the walls of the rooms. Entrance was secured through the cellar.

—Newton subscribers of the New England Telephone Company will be interested to learn that a new lightning arrest-er has been invented which the company has adopted. It is thought to be an improvement over those now in use. Newbury-port, Mass., has been selected as the place for trial of the new device, and Manager Welch will soon attach them to the more important lines.

—The largest land deal of the year has just been put through in Newton. A large part of all the land from Morton street, Newton Centre on the east, nearly to Valentine Park, West Newton, on the west, and lying between Homer and Valentine streets on the south, and Mill and Hull streets extended on the north, has been purchased by a syndicate. The new concern is the Newton Land & Improvement Company, and the property is in the hands of G. W. Morse of Newton, Jonathan A. Lane of Boston and H. B.
Parker of Newton, trustees. The tract contains about 6,000,000 square feet, running nearly a mile from east to west and comprising a considerable part of the central section of the new Newton boulevard.

—Lessons from Chicago will be the

—In his final examinations at Harvard this year one of the graduates of Mr. Cut-ler's preparatory school took credits in every subject in which he was examined, covering nine hours, having previously in his preliminary examinations taken credits in subjects covering three hours. An interesting fact in this connection is that the young man is a son of the first pupil Mr.
Cutler prepared for college.

—Early in the season the Newton Street Railway Company was asked to contribute towards the expenses of giving a series of open-air concerts by the Crescent Band on Waltham Common and did so on condition that they would be given on stated evenings, one of which was July 10th. Receiving no notice from the band in advance of this date that they would give no concert,
the announcement was made on the cars as usual that one would be given. At 4 p. m.
notice was received that the majority of the band were out of the city so that the concert would have to be postponed. The signs were then withdrawn. The company has been accused of trying to fool the public to win travel, hence this explanation.

OVER FOUR SCORE AND TEN.

TIMOTHY H. CARTER PASSES AWAY AT THE AGE OF 95 YEARS.

Mr. Timothy Harrington Carter, one of the oldest business men of Boston,
died at his home in Newtonville, Wednesday afternoon, at the age of 95 years and 6 months.

He was well known among the older men of affairs in the Hub, and up to within a few months has been quite active and energetic in the management of his considerable property, which consisted largely of real estate, including the new building on Water street, Boston, which bears his name.

So well had Mr. Carter's physical health been preserved that he was confined to his bed only a day or two previous to death. His mind also remained clear and vigorous.

About five years ago, on his 90th birthday anniversary, Mr. Carter wrote and had printed for family distribution an autobiographical sketch, which contains frequent reference to some of the landmarks of old Boston, and, therefore, is of general interest. With the consent of the family some extracts were furnished
the Boston Herald and are given below:

"In 1807, at the age of 8 years, I left home to live with an aunt at Petersham, Mass.,—a widow lady, by the name of Bridge, who the next year was married to Dr. Fisher and removed to Beverly. I going home for six months. At the end of that time I went to Beverly to live at Dr. Fisher's, where I remained until I came to Boston in 1815, into the book store of Cummings & Hilliard, corner of Spring lane and Washington street, then called No. 1 Cornhill. My compensation was $40 a year and board from that time until I was 21—a usual arrangement at that time. Soon after becoming 21 I was taken into the business, the firm then being Cummings, Hilliard & Co.

"I will say here that while I remained at Beverly—some five or six years in all
—I acquired considerable expertness in the use of tools, making many little things to sell, such as bobbin looms, knitting needles, etc.; so that the ladies of the neighborhood got to coming to me to get various things made. I also made teapots; handles for a silversmith who made teapots; also washboards,
with rollers instead of the fluted board,
thus subjecting the clothes to much less wear. I also took wood to saw and split, on winter evenings, for next-door neighbors—sawing and splitting and piling,
in one instance, six cords at 50 cents a cord. In this way when I came to Boston I had $30 well earned silver dollars.

"In Boston, during the early part of my apprenticeship, I worked late evenings, painting maps, making writing books, and folding and stitching pamphlets. I also made liquid blacking and black and red ink. I did such extra work until the interests of the store demanded every minute of my time. On one of my business trips (to Baltimore), while an apprentice, I traded off and sold, at my own discretion, some $20,000 worth of books.

"In 1827, having acquired a moderate fortune, I left the firm with which I was connected, desiring to enter upon some course of study, and thus make up for the deficiencies of my early education.
Not knowing to what it might subsequently lead, I concluded to spend a year abroad, and make there a trial of study.
I began my studious course in Paris, but soon found it was too late to study; the time had passed when my mind could rest in elementary studies—it was too active in planning and executing—and I gave it up. Having returned to America, I set out to find another publishing house, thinking finally to retire from its active operations and be a silent partner.

"I took a lease of the estate on the corner of School and Washington streets, and at the expense of some $7000 fitted it up for a book store and printing office. My brother Richard, not then of age, was with me, and C. I. Hendree was my clerk. When all was in profitable operation, I sold to each of them one-third of the business, becoming myself a silent partner—making the firm name to be Carter, Hendree & Co., establishing what is now called the "Old Corner Book Store."

"The first type foundry established in Boston was mine; and in connection with it I also established the first stereotype foundry in New England. I placed my brother Charles at the head of this establishment, which was carried on under the firm name of F. H. & Charles Carter.

"The business outgrew a building I had erected for it in Harvard place, and was removed to a larger building, near the North church, on Salem street. Here, having with Nathan Hale, Esq., for whom I wish to express esteem when I write his name, purchased the right to use the Treadwell power printing presses, we added machine printing to the establishment—the first of such printing done in the city—first by horse power

and then by steam. Beside this, Mr.
Hale had a printing office of his own,
and together we jointly owned still a third, run by water power, on the Mill dam. Subsequently the establishment was removed to the corner of Devonshire street and Spring lane, where the third building was erected for it, and on the Salem street land I built nine dwelling houses.

"As the wholesale business of Carter, Hendree & Co., grew very large, they sold the retail department to Allen & Ticknor, neither of whom, however,
would then engage in the business unless I also continued in it, so I became a silent partner in the firm of Allen, Ticknor & Co., and subsequently sold my share to them.

"The estate at the corner of Washington and School streets was the property of rich owners, who had determined to rebuild there as soon as certain expected changes took place, so that the utmost time they would give a lease of it was for six and a half years. But under that lease of six and a half years I put the estate into

CITY GOVERNMENT.

WALTER B. RANDLETT APPOINTED CHIEF OF FIRE DEPARTMENT—AN INTERESTING SEQUEL TO THE NEWTONVILLE SCHOOL LAND CONTROVERSY—LAND FOR THE PIERCE SCHOOL DISCUSSED.

The board of mayor and aldermen held a second special session last Monday evening and some important matters came up for consideration during the meeting. The opening scenes were slightly sensational in character, one member insisting on holding the floor in opposition to the ruling of the mayor that he was out of order.

There were quite a number of members of the school board present, interested in the further action expected, regarding the purchase of a lot of land at Newtonville for schoolhouse purposes.

The mayor called the board to order and the reading of records was postponed on Alderman Hunt's motion.

APPOINTMENTS.

The mayor declared an appointment which will receive the warm endorsement of every citizen of Newton.

That Walter B. Randlett be appointed chief of the fire department to succeed Henry L. Bixby, deceased.

The appointment was unanimously confirmed.

Henry W. Mariner and William E. Fuller were appointed and confirmed as members of the regular police force.

THE VETO.

The mayor submitted a communication, returning without his approval the order appropriating $12,000 for the purchase of 71,050 feet of land, corner of Watertown and Edinboro streets for school purposes.

His reason for so doing was to give the aldermen who desired an opportunity to further consider the matter.

Before the mayor had opened the matter to the board Alderman Thompson rose to a point of order.

A WAR OF WORDS.

The mayor—Please state your point of order.

Alderman Thompson—I rise to a point of order, or rather to a question of privilege. I will state it in a moment. Addressing the executive he said at the last meeting when the mayor was absent the order in question came before the board in due form and was considered and passed by a yeas and nays vote without opposition. The public property committee of which he was chairman had previously unanimously recommended the order as passed. Both branches had concurred in the passage of the order.

Afterward an order for $500 to procure plans for the school building came up and a member of the board then made the statement that the land could be bought for $2000 less. He might just as well have said that $2000 was to go into the pockets of the public property committee. The effect had been to cast a severe reflection on the committee. He considered it an insult to every member of the board and of the common council, and an insult to the citizens of Newton who had elected such a set of rascals as the public property committee. Referring to the aldermen from Ward Four, (Alderman Plummer), he said that in not giving his information in the first place when the order was before the board and passed on his vote and others, he lent himself as a party to the corruption implied in his remarks.

The mayor interrupted at this point and demanded with some sternness what the alderman's question of privilege was. The veto gave no privilege until after the message was declared.

Alderman Thompson—I appeal from that decision.

The mayor—the gentleman is out of order.

The alderman insisted in his appeal and his right to continue speaking, the mayor's repeated requests for him to take his seat culminating in a stern command to "sit down," accompanied by free use of his gavel.

Quiet was finally restored after the statutes had been consulted and sustained the mayor's ruling.

A reconsideration was thereupon declared as opened by the veto message and Alderman Thompson continued:

Conferences had been held with the various parties owning land in the vicinity of the location favored by the school committee and citizens. The land selected was offered to the committee for 17 cents per foot after a long discussion, and these people claim they never have offered the land to Alderman Plummer or anyone else for less. The committee had an option on the Knawles land at 20 cents and on the Harrington land at 15 cents, but a petition signed by N. H. Chadwick and 56 other residents of Newtonville favoring the Knawles land decided the committee in its favor and they finally secured its refusal at 17 cents. That did not look as though the public property committee were trying to fleece the city out of $2000. Why such statements were made by the alderman from Ward Four he was at a loss to understand, and doubted if the gentleman himself knew. Unless it might be there was some other land scheme under way which could not be sprung at the proper time. He thought the members of the school committee had carefully studied the matter and were competent to say what they desired.

THE OTHER SIDE.

Alderman Plummer was on his feet as soon as the previous speaker gave way. He said it was a simple question of veracity between Messrs. Knawles, Appleton and himself, and according to the public property committee he was the one against whom the inference was directed. There was no man in the board who could say that he had ever been muzzled or collared and statements, as implied, that he was interested in any "scheme," he repudiated with the contempt in which it was put. He could not be bought or cajoled by anybody. He was working solely in the interests of the city and should be accorded due credit for the same. In regard to the manner in which the matter originated, he said that the sum of $250 was recently appropriated to buy a new horse for the fire department. The horse purchased cost just $150, leaving the balance unexpended. When the $12,000 order under discussion was passed he understood it to read "$12,000 or less," and never thought until the $500 order for plans came up, with the statement of Alderman Thompson that all the $12,000 was needed for the land, that such provision could not be made from the original appropriation. And it was unworthy of this board that any such construction as implied should be put upon his statement. He had an option in writing, offering 40,000 feet, a partial lot of land on Watertown street and Brookside avenue at 14 cents, and the whole lot, 70,000 feet, for 12 1/2 cents, if taken before August 1. These were facts which would be submitted to the board if they desired. There was a chance for the city to save several thousand dollars and it was for their interests to consider such an offer. Any imputation of his honesty or veracity in the matter he strongly resented.

Alderman Thompson submitted a letter from the same gentleman quoted by Alderman Plummer, dated June 15, in which he gave an option at 20 cents per foot. It was signed by Henry F. Ross. Another letter from A. W. Harrington dated June 15, gave the city an option of 15 cents. This did not look as though the public property committee were going to steal $2000 of the city's money. The committee were acting on the policy of buying sufficient land for a second school house when it becomes necessary, later, and the Knawles lot of all those proposed, was most admirably situated and of the proper shape and size.

Alderman Hamilton said he did not rise to discuss the merits of the different pieces of property but to state that he thought the chairman of the public property committee misinterpreted the boards interpretation of the criticism made by Alderman Plummer. He believed no member of the board had the least thought for a moment that the members of the public property committee were otherwise than honest and straightforward. He thought an entirely erroneous impression had been received.

Alderman Plummer said that in his conversation last Monday, but with no malice, he stated that the public property committee had not driven so sharp a bargain, perhaps as they might have done. He wished to take that back. But he said he certainly had no special pressure on Mr. Ross, whom he hardly knew. He went to him and Mr. Harrington and they voluntarily gave him an option. He would submit that it was a better offer to the city than the committee had been able to get.

A GOOD DEAL OF LATITUDE.

After further discussion Alderman Thompson signified a desire to call upon members of the school board who were present.

The mayor asked what he desired to demonstrate.

Alderman Thompson said he wished them to submit their self expressed opinion with regard to the choice of lots and which was most desirable.

Alderman Plummer stated here, that Mr. Boyden told him the other morning that the Harrington lot was by far the most preferable even at the same price as the Knawles lot. In concluding he hoped his veracity would not be in question on this statement.

The mayor said he had thus far allowed the board great latitude in discussion on the matter first presented. He desired to afford them every reasonable facility in a solution of this matter, and if the board so desired would give them a chance to open a hearing so members of the school board could be heard. The board failing to suggest any action he called upon Chairman J. Edward Hollis by Alderman Thompson's request. Chairman Hollis said the lot corner of Edinboro street was the only one he had looked at, personally, and its shape and size he believed well fitted for the present and future needs of the school board. Mr. Smith spoke of the wisdom which the committee believed existed in making provision at this time for the erection in the future of a four room school in connection with the larger one now contemplated. The smaller building would be a future necessity.

Alderman Hunt as a member of the public property committee, said he did not think Alderman Plummer was to reflect on the committee. He said the committee had an option of 15 cents from Mr. Procter on the Harrington land and he did not like the idea of bringing in another price after they had once submitted figures.

The question came on passing the order over the mayor's veto. The veto was sustained by a vote of 6 to 1, Alderman Thompson voting alone.

The orders authorizing the issue of bonds and advertising for plans and specifications, were also returned, and the action sustained by vote of the board.

PERMITS GRANTED.

Applications for building a stable on Allison street, also stable for Morris Welch, were granted by the board.

CHARLES RIVER PARK.

Alderman Rumery for the park committee submitted a report, recommending that the land between the Newton Boat Club house and Weston bridge be taken for park purposes.

The committee had met interested parties in conference as requested.

Alderman Plummer as touching upon this matter in an important light, said in conversation with Mr. Francis Blake, the latter had regretted the failure to conciliate the Newton Boat Club in making the land between the clubhouse and the B. & A. railroad bridge rather than displace the club. This land and privileges would cost them $90,000. He believed with this move, delay in acquiring the park land might be avoidable. The boat club were heartily in favor of a bridge above their clubhouse. The report was received.

THE NEW ORDER.

Alderman Thompson, after a brief recess, presented an order appropriating $9000 for the purchase of 70,000 feet of land bounded by Watertown and Walker streets and Brookside avenue, for school purposes. This was passed by a unanimous yeas and nays vote.

Orders authorizing the issue and sale of nine $1000, 20 year bonds to be denominated, Newtonville School Loan and authorizing the public property committee to advertise for plans and specifications for an eight room school house at Newtonville at an expense not to exceed $100 were passed.

Alderman Plummer endeavored to have the latter order amended to give Newton architects the preference in bidding but was unsuccessful.

PETITIONS.

Petitions were received and referred, from A. E. Brickett, et al., for crosswalks at Webster place and Oak avenue; for innholders' license on Chestnut street; E. F. Towne et al., for sewer in Bridge street.

Alderman Hunt offered orders which passed giving notice and appointing hearings for the construction of sewer on the south side of Waban park and in Ware road.

BOYD'S POND.

Alderman Rumery presented an order to appropriate $500 for cleaning out the bed and brook of Boyd's pond.

Alderman Bothfeld asked if this matter could not lay over for the present as the city's finances were rather low. It was tabled.

CAUTION TO DRUGGISTS.

After another recess Alderman Roffe offered a resolution; that whereas a sixth class license allows the use of liquors for medicinal and mechanical and chemical purposes only and that it has appeared that sales of intoxicating liquor have been made without full compliance with the law, the city clerk be instructed to notify them that they will be held to strict account, and that forfeiture of the same will result, from proof presented that the law has been violated in the slightest degree.

This was adopted.

MORE LAND.

Alderman Thompson offered an order authorizing the public property committee to purchase 108,000 feet of land situated in West Newton and bounded by Elm and Webster streets and Oak avenue for the sum of $20,000 for school purposes, and authorizing provision for its payment by 20 year 4 per cent bonds.

This order was somewhat of a surprise to the board and provoked a general discussion.

Alderman Thompson in support of the order said the land quoted was offered the city at a very low price and although more than was needed by the city could not be secured unless all of it was taken.

Alderman Hunt said it seemed a large quantity of land for the city to take for school purposes, but it was the only available land that could be secured in Ward Three and was entirely satisfactory to the citizens.

Alderman Plummer understood land taken by the city for a specific object could not be re-sold.

Alderman Thompson said that it could. It had been done under certain restrictions in connection with the Wade school property.

Alderman Roffe was not prepared to vote on the matter. The land might be low enough but he did not believe the city could sell any part of it after it was purchased.

Alderman Hunt was undecided on this point. Only about $8,000 feet would be needed for the school house, but he believed it a wise policy to buy the whole lot.

The mayor explained that the trouble would be to secure a conveyance of the title.

Alderman Hamilton asked if land in the vicinity of the school house would not deteriorate in value.

Alderman Hunt said in this case the property would not be affected, as the best lots front on Elm street. He added that the site was unanimously endorsed by the school board. The land would not be sold unless all was purchased.

Alderman Bothfeld believed the matter should receive mature consideration.

The city was doing well to build one school house a year, but two seemed a little faster than it ought to go. The present school house was considered far enough away and with the growth of population tending south, the wisdom of locating a new school house still further north might be questionable. Another point for consideration was whether the city had a right to purchase for "school house purposes" more land than they needed for the purpose.

Alderman Hunt said additional school accommodations must be provided in Ward Three by next fall. Another room was indispensable, so says the superintendent, and some provision must be made. The city will have to hire one extra room anyway, as eight rooms would not do the work requiring nine.

Alderman Plummer said at the risk of being called pernicious by the school authorities, he believed the interests of the city demanded mature deliberation in the further expenditure of money, unless the members of the board wished to retire to private life with the stigma of having been the most expensive, the city had ever seen.

Alderman Thompson believed the school houses of Newton were a vital consideration in the development of the city. People are deterred from coming here by the unsatisfactory buildings provided for the instruction of their children. Only a few days since he learned of a party who contemplated moving back to Boston just for this reason alone.

Alderman Bothfeld, returning almost unconsciously, to the subject at hand, said this was a purchase in which the city should make no error. There was more land than was necessary, and could or should the city make the purchase at this time? He believed in discretion.

Alderman Hunt said he had heard a rumor about a syndicate who were negotiating the purchase of this lot. He could not vouch for the truth of it.

Alderman Roffe at this time moved to table and the motion prevailed against the opposing votes of Alderman Hunt and Thompson.

The board then assembled in executive session.

Common Council.

A special meeting of the common council was called Wednesday evening by order of the mayor, to take action on his veto of the $12,000 order for purchasing land at Newtonville for a schoolhouse.

The president of the council and Messrs. Briston, Green and Dickens were absent, so the council was assembled by senior Councilman Weed, who was once chosen chairman of the meeting by ballot.

PLACED ON FILE.

After the records were read and approved, the mayor's message returning the $12,000 appropriation for schoolhouse land at Newtonville, was submitted and simply placed on file, no action being taken. The associate orders, relative to the same matter, were also filed.

Communications were submitted from Harrington, et al., offering the city 70,000 square feet of land bounded by Watertown and Walker streets, at 12 1/2 cents or 40,000 feet for 14 cents. Also from Henry F. Ross offering the city 61,400 feet at 16 cents.

THE NEW ORDER.

When the order to appropriate $9000 for the purchase of the Harrington and Knawles land came before the board, Councilman Savage moved a suspension of the rules for a second reading.

Councilman Tolman said the order had been put through the other board without the authority of the public property committee. It had not come before them at all and he believed the committee should be accorded that courtesy.

The question of suspending the rules was carried and after the second reading Councilman Tolman moved to table the order.

The motion was carried, Councilman

ANOTHER LOT.

The order authorizing the expenditure of $100 for plans and specifications for the new schoolhouse caused another discussion.

Councilman Tolman moved a second reading and then explained that he had received information that land near that contemplated could be purchased much cheaper than any yet quoted.

Councilman Savage asked where it was situated.

A—Directly opposite the Harrington land on the other side of Watertown street.

Councilman Bullard after ascertaining that the land mentioned was on the north side of the street, said it was the policy of the school board when possible to locate schoolhouses on the south side of the street, as better light was secured for the occupants. He thought the land on the southerly side might be preferable even at a higher figure.

Councilman Tolman thought a good deal of the trouble experienced by the public property committee was because they had tried so hard to please the school committee in every particular and knowledge of this attitude on the part of the public property committee had influenced land owners in submitting figures.

A second reading was then called for. Councilman Tolman did not wish to delay purchase of the lot any longer than necessary, but believed a thorough investigation would facilitate matters in the final action.

Councilman Ross said few architects would care to submit estimates on the building until the land had been purchased by the city.

Councilman Bullard's motion to table prevailed.

A communication was received from W. H. B. Dowse relative to the pollution of a brook on land of Geo. Dix, in consequence of the boulevard construction, and hinting at damages on the same. Referred.

REPORT.

The report submitted to the city council by the board of health relative to the erection and maintenance of one or more bath houses in the city, was favorable to providing public bath houses, in the more thickly settled portions, the experience of Watertown during the year 1893 where 7,000 persons were thus accommodated, showing conclusively its popularity. The board recommended the erection of three bath houses, one on the Charles river at Nonantum upon land of J. W. Bemis on California opposite Chapel street or upon city land, off California street at the Allison pit; at Bullough's pond near Mill street upon land of Hon. William Claflin, or of Geo. W. Morse, et al; on the north shore of Crystal lake upon land of Emeline H. Crane, or on the north shore upon land of Sarah H. Fowle. The estimated cost is $700 for each house and maintenance of each per month for three months $60—$640, a total of $2640.

The council adjourned to Sept. 10.

A Step Forward.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

It has been highly gratifying to our citizens generally to find it possible to have better order on the early morning of the celebration of the 4th of July. Some have been afraid that the reckless elements among us had grown so strong that to do what the city government would it could not repress the racket which had assumed in late years such large proportions. Prompt action on the part of the authorities and a little expense have won a very decided victory this year over disorder. Next year it is hoped that the quiet will be maintained here as late as four o'clock as in Boston.

Our citizens must remember that apart from the misery of disturbed sleep and constant alarm they are compelled to help pay the damage done by these strolling gangs. It costs less to have an extra police force than to foot the bills for repairing the mischief.

But while all right-minded persons are glad to see that laws can be enforced here, the question comes up whether a little more public spirit on the part of these same right-minded persons would not remove much of the temptation to disorder and make the day a pleasure instead of a trial.

Why should not each Ward have its celebration?

Suppose at some early hour, say at 8 or 9 o'clock on the 4th there was a general gathering of young and old to sing patriotic songs and to listen to the reading of the Declaration and an address or two. After that have a band concert and some games. At night instead of each man's settling off a few fire works in front of his own house let there be some clubbing together to make a better display in central fields or places away from the danger of setting fire to buildings.

A very great deal might be done to make the 4th an enjoyable day to all if the people would only go to a little more trouble and expense.

A Record Trial at Waltham.

Saturday afternoon, July 14, there will be another attempt to break the world's record for a mile on the bicycle from a flying start. "Little Pinky" Bliss of the Rambler team will make the attempt and has been following a special course of training there all this week under the direction of the manager of the team, Mr. Atkins, who is very well known in the wheeling world as a successful team manager. Bliss feels confident that he can beat the record made by J. S. Johnson in 1.56. He says he can do it in 1.51, if he has the proper pace-makers. His pacers will be three tandem men, H. Githens, A. Lumsden, A. W. Warren, D. Conolly, Cutter and L. J. Berle. Each tandem will pace for him for one lap. There will also be three racing events for Class A men, a one mile open, a third mile open and a boy's mile. A. W. Porter will also try for his Class A record of 2.03 made at Waltham July 4th.

Hospital Notes.

All the rooms on the first floor of the private ward are now occupied by paying patients.

The second floor of the private ward is to be refurbished at once so as to supply any demand for the accommodation of private patients.

The price per week has been considerably reduced at the Hospital so that it is really not more expensive to have a room there than to send for a trained nurse. All the doctors of the city have the new terms.

Persons putting up jellies and preserves should remember that every tenth jar or tumbler can be taken care of at the Hospital.

HOME OF AMATEUR ATHLETICS.

WHAT A WRITER IN THE HERALD THINKS NEWTON WILL BECOME.

"The tendency toward athletic development," says the Boston Herald, "has grown apace during the past ten years, and has brought into existence numerous clubs and organizations devoted to that special branch of physical culture. It has given birth to many new forms of recreative amusement, and has clung, of course, to those games such as running, hurdling and the like which date back to a period long before the new world was in evidence."

"There is a spot in this state where there seems to be a concentration of amateur athletic interests, an ideal place, seemingly, for the grouping of various clubs and the consequent bringing together of a large number of people identified with gentlemen's sport, including tennis, cricket, foot ball, boating, canoeing and the usual field and track events not classified under the head of 'professional.'"

"Newton is destined to be, in the near future, the great centre of attraction for amateur athletic events in this state. It will become so, partly, because of its natural adaptability in the way of great park and playground facilities, and through the location there of the two largest athletic organizations in Massachusetts."

"It is now well known that the B. A. A. management has secured an adjunct to its magnificently equipped clubhouse in the Back Bay district of the Hub, a large tract of 23 acres on the Weston side of the Charles river, nearly opposite the Newton Boat Club's attractive building and grounds. A building will be eventually erected there at a cost of about $40,000, including a bathhouse. Work on the latter is already well under way."

"The surrounding grounds are being properly laid out, comprising cricket, base ball and foot ball fields, one-quarter mile cinder track and twenty or more tennis courts. These grounds, within a stone's throw of the Riverside station in Newton, will give B. A. A. members a first-class opportunity for outdoor sports."

"The situation is one of the most picturesque on the line of the winding Charles. The club building will be on high ground, overlooking the Newton boulevard, and the entrance to the grounds from that wide, beautifully kept thoroughfare will be by the way of a substantial bridge."

"Naturally, this addition to the club buildings along the river in the vicinity of Riverside will give a great impetus to the game of canoeing, and will make the locality the most notable and popular resort for that sort of amusement in New England. The facilities for aquatic contests are admirable, and it will be strange, indeed, if the infection of so much new blood does not result in many interesting contests with paddle and oar."

"The B. A. A. outdoor grounds will be the scene, undoubtedly, of many exciting base ball and foot ball matches, in which the college eleven will hustle for goals and touchdowns. Few places, if any, in the country will furnish such accommodations for holding a big tennis tourney."

"The new clubhouse of the Newton A. A., the second largest athletic association in the state will be located near the boulevard on private land adjoining the Newton Centre playground, about 200 feet from Homer street. The building will be erected in time for the foot ball contests this fall. Its dimensions will be 20x80 feet, and it will be a substantial attractive structure from plans of O. F. Smith, architect. It will stand on high ground at the turn of the boulevard, so that it can be seen dead ahead for a long distance by those coming in the westerly direction through the Newtons."

"The building will cost, when completed, about $30,000. In the basement there will be a swimming tank, 15x30, with a lounge and rubber room adjoining, in which there will be an open fireplace; bowling alleys of the regulation pattern, toilet rooms, storage apartments for bicycles, drying room and a room for steam heating plant and coal cellars. There will be provision beside for 375 lockers and several private dressing rooms."

"The main gymnasium, 35x82, will be located on the first floor. There will be an open space beyond of over 100 feet, with ample room for a 50-yard straightaway dash. The latter feature is a notable one, as it can be found in only a few athletic clubs in the country. There will be ladies' dressing rooms on the first floor, and a hand ball court, 13x30, extending up two stories. There will be, also, a cozy reception parlor, 15x17, situated near the main entrance, instructor's apartments and an examination room, the latter opening into the gymnasium."

"The boxing and fencing rooms are to be located on the second floor, where there will be a running track, which will be utilized, if desired, for a balcony for spectators, as it overlooks the grounds."

"Other apartments on the second floor will be the billiard room, 15x41, with large window seat and open fire-place, smoking room and offices of the board of control."

"One of the unique features of the building will be a roof garden, open on all sides for air and light, and protected from the sun's rays by awnings. It will be lighted in the evening by electricity. Its furnishings will consist of tables, where refreshments can be secured, and plenty of comfortable chairs for the use of members and visitors. At the extreme end of the garden there will be a small stage for an orchestra or other attractions."

"In the winter the garden will undergo a change that will make it available for winter games and exercises. It is to be accomplished by those simple devices known as shutters, which, it is expected, will exclude the cold blasts which, in the form of more gentle breezes, proved agreeable during the hot months."

"The club's out door fixtures will consist of base ball and foot ball fields, and facilities for track and field athletics. There will be excellent accommodations for spectators. The board of control of the club comprises twenty-five of the leading men of Newton. This board of control owns the building and grounds, and can shape the policy of the club. Ladies are to be accorded the privileges of the 'gym' during the morning hours. Its equipment will be up to the standard, with every necessary up-to-date appliance."

"The club intends to make a feature of junior membership, following somewhat the plan of the B. A. A. in that respect. Among the members who have taken prizes for sprinting, jumping and hurdling are Jim Morse, Redpath, Skelton and Hersey. Its base ball team has Upton, Soule and Whittemore of the Harvard varsity nine; Bowen, Warren, formerly captain of Brown and Hubbard, formerly captain of Yale. It has developed this season a great pitcher in Walter Fitz, who has a phenomenal record of strike-out for young player. There is the nucleus for a strong foot ball eleven. The tennis interests of the club will be represented by Fred Hovey, the winner against Hobart, Chase, Wrenn and others in the Neighborhood Club tourney."

"The B. A. A. boat house at Riverside, now almost completed, will cost to build about $6000. It will have accommodations for 100 boats, and has 500 lockers. It is located on the easterly side of the grounds, looking down the river. It is provided with ladies' apartments, and has a ladies' entrance under a covered porch. The building is one-story high, with a flat roof surmounted by an awning, and to be utilized for a promenade. With these enumerated attractions, the boulevard extending from the heart of Boston through the Newtons, tracing its broad way through beautiful woodland and a section of country unsurpassed for charming rural scenery, clear to the banks of the Charles river, a distance of 14 miles, one might easily picture great possibilities for the athletic future of Newton."

"The boulevard will be the clear path for the bicyclists, who will have a section of road especially built for their use. It will be available for road events, and a popular resort for wheelmen, who could make the run to the river from the Hub in quick time, there to find boating and bathing privileges and, very likely, en route, numberless attractions to while away a pleasant hour. The patrons of the four-in-hand drags will no doubt take in the many interesting events, and the swift-moving electricies will bring thousands of pleasure-seekers to witness the tennis, foot ball, cricket, aquatic and other contests."

HIGHLANDS BATTED FOR 15 HITS.

NEWTON A. A. S. WIN FROM NATICK Y. M. C. A. S.

The games at Natick Saturday between the leaders in the Suburban league was one of the finest contests of the league's season.

Natick had Andy Highlands of Harvard in the box, and Fitz, the rising young high school player, pitched for Newton.

Newton succeeded in beating Yale's record by making 15 hits off Highlands, while Natick made but six off Fitz. Highlands struck out seven and Fitz nine men.

Both teams fielded finely.

MILL STRIKE STILL ON.

IDLE WORKERS' CONDITION REPORTED AS VERY SERIOUS.

After seven weeks of idleness the striking silk workers of Newton Upper Falls are in a pitiable condition, according to the reports given out by members of the Silk workers union, but they aver that the strike will continue.

At a meeting of the strikers Monday afternoon the situation was thoroughly canvassed, and many of the girls expressed a wish for a speedy settlement of the trouble.

It was reported that negotiations were pending by the officials of the works to get a number of the girls to return to work with a promise of better wages in the future, and to that end a paper was circulated among the employees.

It is also said that but few signed the paper, as they were determined to return to work only by vote of their union.

The men do not appear at all concerned about the rumor that the girls will desert their union, claiming that even if they should, they could only work a short time without the men.

Mr. Ryle, the head of the firm, is reported to be still in Europe and is not expected back for several weeks.

The breath of a chronic catarrh patient is often so offensive that he becomes an object of disgust. After a time ulceration sets in, the spongy bones are attacked, and frequently destroyed. A constant source of discomfort is the dripping of the purulent secretions into the throat, sometimes producing inveterate bronchitis, which is usually the exciting cause of pulmonary disease. The brilliant results by its use for years past properly designate Ely's Cream Balm as by far the best and only cure. Call upon your druggist for it.

CHIEF BIXBY'S SUCCESSOR.

Walter B. Randlett has been appointed Chief of the Newton fire department to succeed the lamented H. L. Bixby. The members of the city council were, apparently, satisfied that the interests of citizens and tax-payers would be best conserved by the promotion of a man who had proved himself capable in a subordinate position and who had gleaned from personal daily contact with his former chief, much of the spirit of ceaseless activity, wise discipline and keen foresight that had prominently marked the management of fire matters in this city.

Citizens very generally regard the selection of Mr. Randlett as a wise one and confidence is expressed that the past admirable record of the department will be perpetuated. With good qualities as a fire fighter, the possession of considerable executive ability and the good opinion and confidence of the best citizens behind him, Chief Randlett enters, at least, auspiciously upon his new duties and there is every reason to believe that success will crown his efforts and the future tell the story of his achievement.

Of course, there are those who had hoped that an outside man would be selected, believing that a new policy would be beneficial and that a change in the membership of some of the companies would be a step in the line of improvement. The policy of the former chief was quite freely criticised by some people, but it can be said with truth that more opinions on the best way of procedure in arresting the progress of a significant blaze can be counted upon than the number of town people at a free collation. There is a disposition, in a word, to freely and generously give advice on the handling of fires and the official of the department who escapes censure, no matter how thoroughly and wisely his work may have been performed, can be safely referred to as a most fortunate individual.

Now, as a matter of fact, not one man in a group of one hundred is competent, as a rule, to give an opinion on the best method of attacking or following up a fire. Notwithstanding, the tendency to "talk through the hat," if that phrase will be permitted here, sets many tongues in motion and keeps up a respectable standing army of critics. It is enough for the people of Newton to know that the experts all over the country, men of ripe experience, and whose opinions count for something, held Chief Bixby in high esteem for his qualities as a fireman. If Chief Randlett can maintain the high standard which distinguished the administration of his predecessor, no grave apprehensions need be entertained for the future of Newton's fire department. It has stood well in the past and is not likely to deteriorate under the management of one who has worked in harmony with its former able and cautious director.

STRIKES are of that class of regrettable occurrences which begin and end in distress and generally fail to bring about any good result. There are some lessons, however, to be learned from the growing discontent of the working classes and one is the importance of restrictive legislation to prevent the formation of selfish trusts and combines. The present status of the industrial conditions in this country emphasizes the necessity of protection alike for capital and labor. Gov. McConnell of Idaho, referring to the conflict between the A. R. U. and the railroad managers growing out of Mr. Pullman's refusal to arbitrate the question of disagreement between his company and his laborers, suggests the advisability of Congress passing a compulsory arbitration law to apply to all differences between corporations interested in transportation and their employees. He has been induced to make the suggestion, he says, because of his belief that "the best efforts of this nation should be exerted not to suppress the laboring men of the United States, who are struggling to obtain what they think is justice, nor to damage the corporation against which their efforts are directed, but to ascertain first, what is right, and then enforce it."

REV. W. H. SAVAGE of Watertown, in a very fascinating paper in the July number of "The Arena," defines the religion of Whittier and how he proclaimed it in his verse. "God for him," Rev. Mr. Savage says, was not a reminiscence, not an absentee Lord of the world and of men, but a Presence glorifying nature and inspiring the daily life of His children. He found in the Quaker faith the charter of his spiritual freedom and his warrant for living like a son of God. He regarded God as, in fact, as well as in name, "our Father in heaven," and his writings express everywhere his simple and complete trust in the divine goodness."

ORINTON M. HANSCOM, formerly chief inspector of the Boston police department, has been appointed deputy superintendent of that department. He was re-instated recently, the charges against him under the Supt. Small regime having been refuted by strong evidence. His vindication and restoration to active duties is a source of much gratification to his large circle of friends.

MAYOR FENNO, it seems, is responsible for the restrictive Fourth of July order which postponed uncanny noises and the usual racket of Independence day celebrations for a few hours. He acted wisely, judging from the experiences of a year ago. The boys have been given plenty of rope and as the saying goes, "finally hung themselves," through abuse of certain privileges.

MR. FRED POND, for many years business manager of the Boston Ideals and the famous Bostonians has been appointed business manager of the Boston Theatre, to fill the place made vacant by the death of the late Harry McGlen. Mr. Pond has a large circle of friends in Boston and its suburbs.

THE Vigilant has apparently struck an adverse current. The Yankee boat, a grand success at home, has sort of dropped into the consomme in strange waters.

"It seems appropriate just now to speak of Chicago, Ill.," says the Boston Herald.

ABOUT A BRIDGE.

SOME POINTS REGARDING A CONTROVERSY
RELATIVE TO LOCATION.

When the B. A. A. secured land at Riverside for a country club house and grounds the matter of providing an approach to the property was neglected. The work of building the boathouse and other buildings is now under way, and for the past few weeks the officers of the club have been grappling with the problem of how to reach there from the Riverside station.

It was at first proposed to build a new bridge over the Charles in conjunction with Mr. Charles Hubbard, who is anxious to obtain a direct road to the Auburndale station from his estate in Weston. Steps were taken to secure land for one approach to the bridge opposite the B. A. A. property, and just below the Newton boat club building. The trouble commenced at this point.

The officers of the Newton boat club at once protested on the ground that a bridge at that point would completely spoil the river view from their clubhouse, and would result in seriously marring the beauty of one of the most picturesque reaches of the Charles.

The proposed location is less than 250 yards below the N. B. Clubhouse, and directly in the center of the course used in the annual boat races.

The general boating public joined with the club in opposing the building of the bridge. The land on the Newton side of the stream was already held by Mr. Hubbard, and as a last resort the desirability of the land as an addition to the river park system of Newton was brought to the notice of the city government. The committee on parks has viewed the ground, and prepared a report in favor of taking the tract, embracing more than 450,000 square feet, for a park. An order has been prepared taking such action, and is being held by the chairman of the committee pending another conference with Mr. Hubbard and the representatives of the B. A. A.

This action will be taken solely because of the strong pressure brought to bear on the board by the boating interests, and solely to prevent the bridging of the river at this point. It is very probable that in the event of the seizure of this land under the park act for this purpose the B. A. A. to test the legality of the proceeding.

In case the bridge cannot be built at this point an expense of more than $60,000 will be entailed on the builders, as the use of the only other available site would necessitate the buying out of two boat-letting establishments and the purchase of a large tract of very valuable land. In view of this heavy expense the city authorities are willing to defer action for the present, but it is very probable that they will allow any bridge to be built between the Newton boat clubhouse and Weston bridge.

If such a structure should be erected at this point it would make three bridges, including the railroad bridge, within an eighth of a mile of each other, while above the clubhouse the new bridge, if built, would do away with a footbridge which spans the river at present.

The prospect of resort to legal proceedings to secure the building of the bridge has added interest to the controversy, and the next move is waited with a good deal of interest.

Tremont Theatre.

Miss D'Arville's performances of the title role of "The Grand Duchess" at the Tremont Theatre last week was one to be long remembered. It takes a singer imbued with the chic and verve of the French to adequately portray the wilful young monarch, and Miss D'Arville is fully possessed of these qualities. Her singing was never so good, and her acting was full of a vivacity that carried the audience by storm. Her costumes were magnificent, and her stage presence was beautiful and overpowering. Her success was unqualified, and "The Grand Duchess" seems opened for a prosperous run. The company supporting Miss D'Arville was above reproach in the slightest degree. The excellent chorus, the admirable staging of the piece, and all the other closely followed details, led to a degree of excellence seldom attained in summer opera. "The Grand Duchess" is down for only a short run, and will be followed by a splendid production of a new opera by two well-known authors, that will be seen for the first time on any stage at the Tremont, with Miss D'Arville and a magnificent company to create the parts.

CHILDREN'S DAY.

Popular Holiday for the Little Ones.

"Forepaugh" day is to be regarded all over the United States and Canada as "Children's Day." This is the highest compliment that could be paid the Adam Forepaugh Shows. To afford so much and such innocent pleasure to little children is a better thing than ever. The children delight in doing honor to Forepaugh and in that respect we are all more or less children. The great shows will be here on Wednesday, July 25th. Who is there who will not want to renew his childhood days by seeing these, the greatest of circus shows? Not many it is feared, and the writer is sure certainly not one of them. There seemed to be nothing left to be done when the great shows were here last, but this year they are better than ever. The management give their word for that, and it must be so, for the public has come to know that whatever the old Adam Forepaugh Shows said for the past thirty years has always been so.

A PONY THAT FLIES.

Mythology recognized Jupiter as the supreme being. Jupiter is also the name of the champion high jumping pony of the world. He is a fat little fellow that is as round as an apple and he is only 48 inches high but he flies like a bird over a bar that is very close to six feet high. In fact, his record that was made at the Mid-Winter Fair at San Francisco last January is 5 feet, 7 1/2 inches. His rider is a little horseman named Elmer Brooks, and he takes his flight over the bar with the same ease as if he was merely cantering along a soft dirt road. Jupiter and Master Elmer are with the Adam Forepaugh Shows and will be seen here on Wednesday, July 25th.

—Mr. F. Arthur McMann had the finest illumination on Otis street the night of July Fourth, and did the most toward the success of the general exhibition. Mr. McMann is a modest man, but his friends insist on giving him the credit which he deserves.

—The Greenfield Gazette has the following in its "Warwick" items: One of the pleasantest of many recent picnics was held on the lawn of Gilbert Maynard, Wednesday. Neighbors and friends assembled in good numbers to cordially welcome the family back from Newton, where they have spent a few years, and dedicate their house, which has been raised up, and newly finished in all parts. It is an attractive house for people who are looking for a hospitable place for a few weeks in the summer.

—The order for the school lot bounded by Walker, Watertown street and Brookline avenue, was laid on the table at the meeting of the common council, Monday evening. It faces on high ground, considerably above the street level, and falls away gradually toward Cheesecake brook. Some residents here do not like the location, preferring one nearer the center of the old Adams school district. The order authorizing and providing for the purchase of the lot passed the board of aldermen. It was selected as a result of a conference of the mayor and members of the public property committee, following the refusal of the council to assent to the purchase of the Appleton and Knowles land. It is claimed that the school board favors it, because it affords room for the erection sometime of a primary school building, there being an area of 70,000 square feet. Councilman Tolman moved to have the order tabled, his reason being that the lot in question was not in reality recommended by the public property committee, as its members had not been officially called together. Another argument for delay was the statement of certain citizens that its location was too near what is regarded as a malarial district. The sentiment of nearly all the members of both branches of the city government is, however, favorable to its purchase. It is claimed that the city would get about the same amount of land as that contained in the Appleton-Knowles lot at a much less cost. The estimated value of the lot passed the board of aldermen. It was figured at about $8000. It, apparently, takes a long time to arrive at a decision on the proper location for a school house here, and it looks now as if the second selection would share the fate of the first, and yet another site be finally selected.

—At a meeting of the Every Saturday Club held at the house of its president, Mr. Albert P. Walker, July 6, 1894, the following resolutions were read and adopted: As God in his infinite wisdom has called to his reward our loved and honored father, Francis A. Waterhouse, therefore, Resolved, that we, associates of the Every Saturday Club, of which he was a highly honored and deeply loved member, do hereby express the profound sense of loss which we experience in his death, and our heartfelt sympathy with his bereaved wife and children. We recognized in Mr. Waterhouse a man eminent in intellectual strength, in scholarly attainments and in his complete devotion to the full performance of the duties pertaining to both his private and his public life. As a teacher he was especially skillful in applying his methods of instruction, and by being himself what he would have his pupils become, he exerted a powerful influence in forming both their intellectual and moral characters. As a member of the Every Saturday Club his exercises always exhibited the marks of a thorough knowledge of his subject and of a remarkable genius in illustrating his ideas to others. In his death we lose one from our number who, by his rare fidelity in all the relations of life and his rare excellence in all, secured our profound respect, confidence and love. Resolved, that we, members of the Every Saturday Club, hereby express to Mrs. Waterhouse and to the bereaved family our deep sympathy, tender to them our heartfelt sympathy. Resolved, that a copy of these resolutions be furnished the Secretary of the Every Saturday Club, for entry upon its records, and that a copy be sent to Mrs. Water-

Mitchell, of Clinton and others, has been sold to the syndicate interested in the development of the Bullough's pond territory. The deal was consummated Tuesday and the price paid was in the vicinity of $75,000. Messrs. George W. Morse and H. B. Parker are among those comprising the syndicate. The laying out of streets and extensive improvement of the land about Bullough's pond is planned.

—Undoubtedly, the finest steam launch in the state was given its maiden dip off Western bridge last Saturday. It is the property of Louis Ross and was constructed at the mills of his father, H. F. Ross, on Crafts street, this city. A more beautiful craft of its class seldom has an opportunity to get a sight at. The boat is 25 feet long and has accommodations for fifteen passengers. The entire frame and keel is of oak. There is a double planking of Spanish cedar inside and an outside finish in Cuban mahogany. The interior wood is also utilized for all the visible inside finish. The work throughout is of the finest character and it would be difficult to improve upon it in any detail. The launch is provided with Clark engines and keel condenser, 355 stroke. The boilers are the Almy water-tube pattern. There are coal bunkers on both sides of the engine. The boat is supplied with pumps, injectors and tanks for salt water use. There is a brass keel plate, running from stem to stern. All the fittings are in brass and copper. The railings and steering gear are solid brass, nickel plated. There are two wheels for steering the craft, one on the side near the engine, the other at the helm. The rudder, propellers and crank shaft are of brass. The cushions have a plush covering and are provided with a cork under fluff, making them serviceable for use as life preservers. The name of the boat "Inez" is carved in gold letters on the stern. Altogether, it is a "dandy" and must be seen in order to be fully appreciated. The cost of the launch, including equipments, was in the vicinity of $2000.

—Commodore Fyffe of the Charlestown navy yard was ordered before the board of admiralty yesterday for promotion.

The examination is for promotion to be rear admiral, the vacancy having been created so that he can be promoted to that grade by the opportune application of Admiral Skeels to be retired, which has just been received by cable from Japan. Inasmuch as Commodore Fyffe must, under the law, be placed upon the retired list on the 28th of this month, the act of Admiral Skeels in creating this vacancy by retirement before the actual time is a matter of much financial importance to Commodore Fyffe. It makes a difference to him of about $1000 annually in his retired pay. Commodore Fyffe will undoubtedly be able to pass the examination for promotion to the rank of rear admiral, and will be promoted, and on July 28 he will be placed upon the retired list at the retired pay of a rear admiral.

—Satisfaction is expressed throughout the city in regard to the appointment of Walter B. Randlett to the vacant fire chief position by Mayor Fenno. Mr. Randlett is 41 years of age, and was born in Milton, Mass. While in his teens he became connected with the fire department of that town first doing service upon a ladder truck and later upon the engine. He was an electrician, and through his efforts the town secured a fire signal system which he constructed. In 1877 he was elected to the board of engineers and served as assistant chief of the Newton fire department. In 1884 the city of Newton applied for his services. He accepted an offer and was made assistant chief of the fire department of this city. He has held that position, with the position of deputy inspector of the wires department, until Monday night, when he was appointed rear admiral as chief of the department. His new duties will entail upon him the position of chief inspector of the wires department.

The company intend to employ only men who are obedient to its rules and regulations and who serve the public in a manner to win approval, rather than censure.

—William Burwell, 14 years old, was arrested last week charged with theft in the fruit store of Pasquale Simone, a place which was entered twice in one day by the "hut gang." Burwell, it is said, walked behind the counter and, it is charged, pulled out the money drawer and removed $10. The money has since been returned. In court this morning Burwell was arraigned and his case continued until Sept. 29.

—A new Sacred Aria entitled, "Blessed are they that do His Commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates into the City," composed by J. Elliot Trowbridge, will be sung in the Congregational church next Sunday, July 15, at the morning service by a vocal soloist. This Aria will also be used in the new oratorio of "Paul the Apostle" by the same composer at the second performance of the work in Newton during the next musical season, and in the many other places where it is to be produced.

—A prominent society event took place Wednesday at high noon, when Miss Jane Harrington Adams and Mr. Henry Whitely Patterson were married in the Congregational church by Rev. Calvin Cutler, pastor of the church.

—Miss Adams is the daughter of Mr. John Quincy Adams of Hancock street, who has been in the office of the treasurer of the commonwealth at the State House, Boston, for a long period, while Mr. Patterson is of the Boston business firm of Cupples & Patterson, located upon Boylston street. The church was filled with guests, who came in response to the 1000 invitations which were issued, the gathering including residents from the Newtons, Brookline, Cambridge, Boston, Pittsburg, Pa., New York and western cities. The interior of the edifice was beautifully decorated. Wild smiles in faces beamed from the rafters to the walls while dotted plants and palms filled every available nook in the front of the church. The scent of pond lilies pervaded the edifice, the lilies being gracefully intertwined with green upon the chancel rail. At 12 o'clock Mr. Charles H. Morse, organist of the Plymouth church, Brooklyn, N. Y., played the opening strains of Mendelssohn's march, and the bridal party moved into the centre aisle toward the altar. A unique feature of the procession was the appearance of Master Donald H. Adams, the 8-year-old brother of the bride. Clad in a suit of white duck, he bore the bride's bouquet in place of the customary maid of honor. Behind him came two bridesmaids, sisters of the bride, Miss Sally and Miss Alice E. Adams. The brides followed, leading on the arm of her father. She was attired in a gown of white silk with overdress of mulle, and wore a tulle veil. The bridesmaids were attired in simple gowns of white dimity and inserted with white chip hats, and they bore in their hands bunches of maiden hair fern. Mr. Fred Varkar of New York served as best man. The ushers were Messrs. Charles A. Hardy, Isaac S. Dillingham, Jr., Albert L. Little of Auburndale, Amasa Walker of North Brookfield, Carl J. Adams and Charles Knowlton of Texas. Immediately after the ceremony a wedding reception was held at the residence of the bride's father, Mr. John Adams, which was attended only by relatives and intimate friends of the family. The couple will enjoy a wedding tour abroad during the summer months. When they return they will take a residence upon Grove street, and will be at home after Jan. 1.

WALTHAM INDUSTRIES.

SCHEMES SUGGESTED FOR RESTORING PROSPERITY IN THE WATCH CITY.

To the Editor of the GRAPHIC:

It often happens that a party having something to sell and another wishing to purchase the same commodity will meet every day and yet fail to do business simply because the subject is never brought up.

A somewhat similar state of affairs exists today between the cities of Newton and Waltham. Newton has money for which it wants to find a safe and remunerative investment. Waltham has several promising industries which could be made to pay at once by a liberal backing; has hundreds of skilled mechanics, who not only need employment, but could make a splendid return to their employers, and last but not least, a world wide reputation for the excellent quality of her manufactures.

This makes it a particularly good place to hail from, especially as nearly every customer carries a sample of Waltham goods in his pocket, which is its own best recommendation. For many years Waltham has been depending for business on two or three industries (principally the watch factory) and now as a result of the introduction of automatic machinery and in consequence of the business depression, there are a large number unemployed.

Business must be done to enable our city to maintain itself so there is but one course to pursue. Something must be developed as a substitute for what we have lost. As is natural we turn most readily toward that industry, which nearest resembles the other one which would give employment to the best advantage to those who are idle. This we find in the clock business, which has been started and already carried beyond the teething period that comes to nearly all new ventures. It now stands in position to command confidence and promises to expand into an industry of such magnitude that Waltham will be as proud of it as she has been of the Watch business, which has made her name famous throughout the world.

The new clock is more perfect than any made in the world, and so simple in construction as to cost less by a large per cent, as well as being easily repaired. Such advantages are hard to overestimate.

The clock habit is rapidly increasing in this country and the demand for the highest grades is greater every year, while the tastes of the people are becoming more and more refined so that what satisfies this year will be sent to the auction rooms next year. To meet this growing demand there must be a greater growth in the clock business, which is employed in the designing and construction of the clocks and cases.

There are several other good things in Waltham, which may later be explained and their merits presented, but as our necessities for employment are pressing, and to my mind the clock business offers the greatest inducement and quickest return, I naturally make it most prominent.

That you might have expert testimony upon which you could rely I invited Mr. Theodore L. Mason of your city to come to the clock factory and inspect the new escapement, which has recently been invented by Superintendent Walter Menas.

He admitted after his visit that he expected to see some modification of some of the old methods, and was greatly surprised and pleased to find something altogether different and greatly superior to any escapement known. When asked for a statement he said: "Say anything in its favor that you please, you cannot put it too strong." He also said, "Send anybody to me and if they take any stock in what I say, they will think it the best clock in the world."

This is what nearly all the experts say of it, so there is but one opinion to that a favorable one. Mr. D. H. Church of the American Watch Company, now Asst. Superintendent, formerly master watchmaker, and probably as good a judge of such matters as any man in the country, when asked for an opinion said: "It seems to have all the merits of the best known escapements, with none of their defects, while its greater simplicity makes it more desirable in being cheaper to manufacture, less likely to get out of order, and easier to repair."

With all these advantages, I cannot see why the Waltham Clock Company can not enter the field with every prospect of success, and as most of the clock companies of the country are doing a good business even in these times, I think anyone having money to invest ought to make a personal investigation (with an expert in whom they had confidence) of this business, and I believe the result will be satisfactory both to them and the company.

It will break the ice for further business relations between the two cities. It is hardly fair or wise for Newton capital to go for the support of western mines or railroads, while the industries of her neighbors are drooping for the want of a little help. And to my mind it is far safer to back a healthy legitimate business, which is near enough to keep an eye on rather than to buy town lots on a plan even though it is within the shadow of the Court House, that is to be, or opposite the million dollar hotel to be built sometime.

Come over and get acquainted with us. The conditions are just right. Newton is not a manufacturing city nor does it want to be. Waltham is and must remain so.

Newton has plenty of idle capital looking for investment. Waltham has more than a plenty of idle mechanics looking for employment. Neither are good for anything separate but by combining them, wealth can be produced which is the sole object of all business.

The amount of money required to set the clock business in good working order is about $50,000, and I should prefer to see it subscribed in small amounts as I contend that the greater the number interested the better for the business. All who care to see for themselves what is being done, will find the factory in the rear of Stark's Block, 222 Moody street. Visitors are welcome, and explanation gladly given.

Now for a matter on which modesty might demand of me to keep silent, but which demand I shall ignore, not being particularly modest. There are many people in Newton to whom I have sold the Springfield Slicer, a bread cutter, and I have testimonials from several of them, but having made a very small amount of improvement on the machine, I am anxious to make the new one in preference to the old pattern, which I have had made in so large a quantity that I shall have many of them left on my hands.

In order to do this an investment of two or three thousand dollars will be necessary. I can show to any one who cares to investigate, where there are profits already in sight to more than make good the entire investment. It is a thing which is wanted in every house and always gives satisfaction. It has a place for holding the loaf, an adjustable gage to govern the thickness of the slice, a first class knife, a place to sharpen it and a pocket to keep it in. The result of its use is principally in the perfectly even thickness of the slices, whether they are for toast, sandwiches, or the table, the gage supporting the loaf so nicely that the last slice is cut as easily and as perfect in thickness as the first one. For the merits of the machine I will refer to Mrs. E. B. Haskell, Auburndale, Mrs. Dr. Thayer, West Newton, Mrs. D. C. Heath, Newtonville.

As to the business prospects of it, consult Mr. Walker of Cornhill, or Mr. Upham of the Youths Companion office. Communications sent to my address will be cheerfully answered.

To drop personal for general matters, let me once more call attention to the superior advantages offered by Waltham to any enterprise which may be started or located here. First, everybody knows just where Waltham is. Its railroad facilities are good, it is a splendid place to live, as the social standard is much higher than in most manufacturing towns, and the people are anxious to keep up that standard or improve it. This can only be done by great care in selecting the industries which must locate here in the future. Watch factory people have been in the habit of earning good wages, living in good houses and wearing good clothes, and certainly we want all future residents to have the same habits as people are sure to live up to their surroundings.

There was never a time when so much could be done for a dollar as today, so what could be wiser than to put these new industries on their feet ready for the good times that must as surely follow this season of depression as day must follow night. The country was never in a condition to warrant hopefulness as it does at the present time. I have the utmost faith in the intelligence and ingenuity of the American people, and I am sure a way will be devised to settle the present difficulty in the way of business depression and bring about such a season of real prosperity as the world has never known.

All admit that things must be reformed, so let us begin the reform at home. There is a lack of confidence so I advise you to come and see what we have to offer in Waltham.

The sight of Waltham industries backed by her own citizens and those of Newton will inspire other places to follow the example, and times will be better.

PICTURE OF CAMP LIFE.

MRS. JEANNE CHALONER SENDS GREETINGS FROM STANISH LAND.

High Pines Camp, July 7, 1894.
From the "Crows Nest" built in the sprawling branches of the oaks far above the roadway, which in the long ago days the brave Captain of Plymouth steadily traversed, let me picture, if I can, the freedom, luxury and rest one finds in camp life.

We are as gypsy-like as possible and it is a famous place to be awfully busy doing nothing. Just now some of the party are boating and gathering lilies, such exquisite pond lilies. I hear the dip of the oars and they call up to me in my leafy perch; then the play of light and shadow on my paper, the swaying of the branches rocks my table; some bees fly down suddenly to see what I am doing and a frog says, "better go round," while another hoarsely croaks "Knu-dup." In happier tone a bird speaks from a neighboring branch, and close by me a squirrel sits tranquilly holding in his dainty paws a fragment from the camp table.

They come and look in at the doorway sometimes and we talk to them, their eyes so bright as they listen, they do not fear us.

The stone fire-place, just built, has absorbed attention for a few days here, and we have dreamed of the pleasure of fireside talk with a happy group watching the glowing embers, and hearing the wind whistle outside in October nights.

One night, not long since, we walked a mile through the woods single file to the Unitarian church with a lantern for a moon, and stopped in the churchyard to look at the long line of graves where so many of the Aldens lie buried. We saw the sweet girl graduates, heard their essays and songs and had the great pleasure of listening to Rev. Mr. Babcock of Baltimore as he addressed the class and held the audience by his eloquence. Mr. Knapp gave the diploma of a little help.

The latter gentleman has the thrift of the colonists, for his fine place serves a double purpose during the school year, the extensive grounds and fine houses serve as a private school for boys, and during vacation, as a hotel for summer sojourners, and all concerned are happy. I am anticipating a trip to Lake Champlain and that charming house at Bluff Point, New York, set in the gateway of the Adirondacks, "Hotel Champlain," and after a trip to Au Sable Chasm and a short stay at Saratoga to return again to camp.

We wear a costume conducive to comfort here, blouse and divided skirt so that we can climb up hill or down, jump into a boat, gather lilies, swing in a hammock or "go a frogging" with ease and comfort.

We live out of doors and even sleep with doors wide open and the moon and the solemn pines looking in at us. It is one of the jolliest places to rest in the wide world.

Soon we go to Plymouth to get a sketch of the grave of the "Nameless Nobleman" and do the quaint old town with its never wearying charm of picturesque and romantic interest.

HOW IT IS IN THE NAVY.

POSITION AND REMUNERATION OF THE ENLISTED MEN.

The vast and varied force of mechanics in the service—Here skilled labor finds steady employment with sure pay. Seaman Class Worst Paid.

Although the seamen and even the petty officers of the United States navy are largely of foreign birth, there never was a time when places in the navy below the rank of commissioned officers were so attractive to native Americans. As the old wooden ships and the old fashioned steam propelled ships give place to modern marine machines the navy becomes more and more suited to the tastes of capable Americans.

Since the Kearsarge laid her bones upon Roncador there are left in really active service only 10 wooden ships, though there are 15 others used as receiving ships and as schoolships of one sort or another. All the sailing ships that ever move from place to place are the training ships and schoolships. The navy has long been made up chiefly of steam propelled vessels, and it will be only a few years before the whole active list will be composed of iron or steel steamships.

This gradual change in the navy has wrought a marked change in the personnel of the petty officers and the enlisted men, as in the conditions under which they work. Captain Codman's mournful cry that there are no more sailors is as true of the navy as of the merchant service. The navy still ships seamen at wages ranging from $16 to $24 per month, but it also ships a host of artificers, mechanics, firemen and whatnot at wages sometimes exceeding $70 per month.

The new navy as it grows will need an increasing number of men in these special classes. There are nearly as many new vessels building as there are wooden ships now on the active list, and every new iron steam propelled monster that is added to the navy creates an increased demand for the skilled and high paid classes of enlisted men. Already there are some scores of machinists at $70 per month, boiler makers at $60, blacksmiths at $50, plumbers at $45, water tenders, oilers, firemen and printers at from $30 to $40 per month, to say nothing of coopersmiths, shipwrights and coal passers at wages varying from $50 per month down to $22.

The seaman class, the worst paid of all in its lower branches, is very well paid in the higher ranks. The lad that enters as a third class apprentice at $9 per month may reasonably hope to become chief master at arms at $65 per month. The lad with a gift for music may easily find himself transferred to the special class that includes musicians, writers and apothecaries, and here the wages vary from $18 to $60 per month.

There is a special provision of law to encourage good men to remain long in the service. The ordinary term of enlistment is three years, and by this provision any honorably discharged man who re-enlists within three months from the date of his discharge returns to the navy with his pay raised $1 per month. The extra dollar is added at each re-enlistment, and there may easily be half a dozen re-enlistments, or for that matter a dozen. It means that a good man who sticks to the service for life gets a three months' vacation every three years, followed by an increase of pay.

It usually happens that the man who thus enlists and re-enlists has reached the grade of petty officer at his third or fourth enlistment, and after that the larger pay of his new place increases regularly $1 per month every three years, should he choose to continue in the service. There are other small perquisites of one kind or another that swell the earnings of the sailor that sticks to the navy, and there awaits him in old age a safe retreat ashore with old companions.

It is true that mechanics in the navy receive nominally smaller wages than men of their trades ashore, but they are subject to none of the uncertainties of business. The navy goes right on in times of panic, and there is no docking for illness. Employment and pay are secure for the rest of a man's days, and promotion is almost within his own control.

The aristocratic organization of the navy doubtless has kept many self-respecting native Americans from enlisting, but the service is vastly more democratic in practice than in theory. True, no enlisted man may hope to become a commissioned officer, but the enlisted man of tried ability and known good conduct always earns the respect and the consideration of his superiors. The brutal officer of the deck is almost unknown in the United States navy, and the self-respecting enlisted man is seldom made to feel that any one looks down upon him.

His food is wholesome, clean and abundant, and the officer of the deck must taste it before it is served to the men at any meal. His quarters are better and better as the navy improves, and the privileges of the well ordered seaman are many and agreeable. The navy department holds out as an inducement to men that think of enlisting the prospect of seeing foreign parts. "Yes, through a porthole," was the old time Jack Tar's cynical comment when a recruiting poster met his eye ashore.

But the seaman whose own conduct does not curtail his "liberty" may see foreign parts as an enlisted man in a satisfactory and instructive fashion. There are scores of enlisted men who are thoroughly trusted ashore as the most staid inmates of the wardrobe. A man's reputation in this regard is not left to mere chance, but is matter of careful record. The man who can make up his mind to endure with patience a life of discipline and regularity finds the navy agreeable, interesting and profitable. New York Sun.

There are a dozen well-known liver pills, but only one so effective that it can be guaranteed to give satisfaction, or the money be refunded. Doctor Pierce's Pleasant Pellets are better than the huge, old-fashioned pills; the medicinal agents are refined and concentrated. Every one suffers, at some time or other, from Constipation, Sour Stomach, Indigestion, Biliousness, Biliary and Sick Headaches. You're relieved and cured of these troubles, if you take "P. P. P."

These Pellets are easy to take, and act in a natural way without shocking the system. They're easy to carry, because they are put up in little glass vials. They're the cheapest, because guaranteed to give satisfaction. Remember, that Dr. Pierce's Pellets are pleasant to take, pleasant in action, perfect in effect. Keep this in mind and you solve the problem of good health and good living.

If you're suffering from Catarrh, the proprietors of Dr. Sear's Catarrh Remedy ask you to try their medicine. Then, if you can't be cured, they'll pay you $500 in cash.

BOSTON AMUSEMENTS.

BOSTON THEATRE.—The return of Pauline Hall to Boston is a source of much gratification to the lovers of light opera who can be depended upon to give that popular singer and the members of her company a cordial welcome. Offenbach's sparkling opera bouffe "La Helene" was selected as the opening attraction of Miss Hall's summer engagement at the Boston Theatre, and large audiences greeted the initial and succeeding productions of the work.
 The supporting artists comprise some of the prominent lights in the profession, including Fred H. Frear, the inimitable and clever comedian; Alf C. Wheelan, an old Boston favorite, and William Pruet-te, the eminent baritone, who appeared in Boston recently with the Lillian Russell Opera Company and who was one of the stellar attractions last season at the New York Casino. Next week, that tuneful and beautiful opera, "The Chimes of Normandy" will be given a grand production. Both from a musical and scenic standpoint, it is intended to make the revival of the opera memorable in the "Hub."

BOSTON MUSEUM.—Mr. Fred Miller's
 "Davey Jones" gives evidence of being calculated to gain wide favor with the summer amusement patrons, and the audience in attendance upon its performances at the Boston Museum gives the leading features their hearty approval. Neither plot nor situation, lines or music, demand serious consideration, but all these characteristics appear to appeal most successfully to the amusement seekers of the day and to meet the demands of summer night audiences.
 The success of "Davey Jones" is added to by the attractions offered in connection with it, these being introduced by a grand concert in the foyer before each performance. "Davey Jones" is announced for a run, with matinees both Wednesday and Saturday.

 ning hop, step and jump. At the same time C. V. Moore with pace makers will

COURTESY IN TENNIS PLAY.
 EXCEPTIONS TAKEN TO AN INCIDENT IN THE RECENT NEIGHBORHOOD CLUB
 TOURNEY.

An incident in the tennis tournament
 at West Newton suggests to a writer for the Boston Herald that there may be a confusion in the minds of both players and spectators as to what constitutes courtesy or discourtesy in play.
 Were the incident wholly exceptional,
 this communication might seem gratuitous and personal; but as similar incidents are somewhat frequent I may simply voice a silent majority whose expressed opinion would prevent their recurrence, or, finding that I have but piped alone, prove the necessity for some change in tennis rules.

It has been thus far the happy fortune of tennis to have escaped the taint of professionalism and to have been governed by the usages of gentlemen. But youth is often quixotic, and apt to forget that the highest justice is never antagonistic to the extremest courtesy.

Friday, in the courts of the Neighborhood Club, two old-time tennis antago-nists, though equally gentlemen and friends, met in contest for honor and a handsome prize. After the match had lasted for about an hour, with the advantage in favor of one player, the other suddenly left his position in the court, walked to one side and sat down, with just a word to his antagonist. His attitude and the attention rendered him suggested sickness or exhaustion, as there was no physical injury apparent.

By permission of his opponent he was allowed several minutes' rest, and, on resuming play, he won the set.

Some of the spectators seemed to approve what they considered the courtesy shown in this permission. To me, it seems that their approval was misplaced, as was possibly also their sympathy. In tennis, as in nearly all athletic contests, endurance wins as deservedly as skill. The oarsman who sank exhausted in his boat before the finish line is reached knows that he is as surely and as justly beaten as though he lacked the skill to take a single stroke. The panting runner never thinks to ask his rival near the goal to wait a moment till he has recovered breath.

That tennis is no anomaly is clearly shown by rule 20 and the history connected with its passage. No player is allowed any rest until after the second set, when he is entitled to but seven minutes, except that "in case of an an-avoidable accident not within the control of the contestants, a cessation of play,
 which shall not exceed two minutes,
 may be allowed between points; but this provision shall be strictly construed, and the privilege never granted for the purpose of allowing a player to recover
 his strength or win."

Such being the rule, it should be lived up to in justice to both players. If a player finds himself growing faint or weak, or on the verge of fainting, he can, if possible, till the end comes in glorious victory or a not inglorious defeat.
 But if this be impossible, let him at once default, and not seek a hollow victory at the gift of his antagonist.

Nor let it shame that antagonist to win
 thus, more than it does his compeer on the water, or on the glider track. The only discourtesy is that which would make a generous antagonist appear to ungenerously refuse a favor, and which seeks to evade a rule knowingly accepted as a standard and meeting out but equal justice.

REPORTS WERE INCORRECT.
 ALDERMAN BOTHFELD POINTS OUT
 ERRORS IN BOSTON PAPERS.

It is quite a common occurrence nowadays to read a paragraph or an account of some event relating to Newton in the Boston papers of one day and on the following day to get a revised or corrected story. One has to give, at least, twenty-four hours, for revisionary work if the facts are of any importance. Concerning a recent report of Fourth of July disturbances, Alderman H. E. Bothfeld sent the following communication to a Boston paper and it appeared Tuesday morning.

Mr. Editor:—
 "As my name has been freely used by the Boston press in connection with a 'riot' so called, on the morning of the Fourth, permit me to say that the published reports were gross exaggerations, inasmuch as absolutely no damage to property or person was done, or even attempted, so far as I know; no eggs or stones were thrown; my house was not surrounded by either a posse of police or a 'mob,' and I did not even leave my room during the short demonstration of yelling and hooting, much less appear and attempt to 'address the mob.' In fact, substantially the whole of the sensational reports were fabrications.

"I have been puzzled to know why,
 from among all the members of the city government, I was selected for such a visitation, and it is only within a few days that I have learned the reason.

"It seems in a recent report in some of the Boston papers of the doings of the board of alderman it was stated that I had introduced a resolution whereby all noise and demonstration on the 'night before the Fourth' was to be prohibited until 3 a. m.

"I introduced no such resolution, and no such resolution was passed. Absolutely no action was taken by the board of aldermen. What I did do, and what several other aldermen did, was to present sundry petitions from the several improvement associations and other social organizations of the city 'for some action to prevent a repetition of the occurrences of last year.'"

"It is the prerogative of the mayor,
 who is at the head of the police force,
 to regulate such matters, without intervention on the part of the board of aldermen, and, exercising that prerogative, Mayor Fenton issued the order to which these misbehaved young men objected.

"Thus it would seem that in venting their disappointment and ill-will upon me the young men, who so well acted
 the part of hoodlums, got the 'wrong man,' and were it not a subject of serious import it certainly would be, for me, a case of 'he laughs best who laughs last.'"

"The whole trouble is directly traceable to the careless, incompetent and responsible young reporters too often employed to gather local news, and it is an outrage not only to the individual,
 but to the community that such misrepresentations can be so easily made." H. E. BOTHFELD.

A Gentleman
 Who formerly resided in Connecticut, but who now resides in Honolulu, writes: "For 20 years past, my wife and I have used Ayer's Hair Vigor, and we attribute to it the dark hair which she and I now have, while hundreds of our acquaintances, ten or a dozen years younger than we,
 are either gray-headed,
 white, or bald. When asked how our hair has retained its color and fullness, we reply, 'By the use of Ayer's Hair Vigor—nothing else.'"
 "In 1868, my affianced
 was nearly bald, and the hair kept falling out every day. I induced her to use
 Ayer's Hair Vigor, and very soon, it not only checked any further loss of hair, but produced an entirely new growth, which has remained luxuriant and glossy to this day.
 I can recommend this preparation to all in need of a genuine hair-restorer. It is all that is claimed to be."—Antonio Alarum,

—The alarm from box 812, Sunday, was for a slight fire at Chestnut Hill on the estate of Mr. J. H. Sawyer. The blaze originated in the cellar of the house occupied by Coachman Russell and was confined below the first floor. The fire was extinguished in a few minutes which might have been a serious matter if the fire had been a large one, as the pressure through the 100 feet of hose which had to be laid, was not enough to be of much use, and not until the engine finally got to work was a good stream turned on the fire.
—Frank H. Nowell of Dorchester, who has been at work setting up the elevator machinery in Bray's block, was seriously injured Monday afternoon. The machinery had been running for an hour or more to test its working. Nowell, who was looking it over, put his hand through a pulley near the throw off to see if the running pulley was getting hot from friction, when the opposite pulley stuck, starting the one through which he had put his arm. His forearm was frightfully lacerated, several arteries being cut.
Dr. May was summoned and the injured man was taken to the Boston City Hospital.
He was fortunate not to lose his arm. This is the first severe accident that has happened during the construction of the

—The inward bound passenger train on the circuit line of the Boston & Albany railroad, due here at 1.08 p. m. Wednesday, had a pane of glass broken in one car
by a large stone thrown at the train while passing Crane's crossing, just above Crystal lake. The missile narrowly missed some of the passengers in the car. The stomping of passenger trains at this point has been of frequent occurrence for a few weeks past. Investigation of these cases proves the perpetrators to be well known Newton Centre youngsters, but the road has refrained from prosecuting them. It is said that this is due partly to the fact that the offenders are sons of prominent citizens. Not long ago Mrs. Foster of Newton-ville, a lady nearly 80 years of age, was struck in the face by a stone while waiting for an electric.

—The tunnel under the Albany tracks has been closed out and the boards removed, as in this dry weather there is no trouble with the drainage.

—Company C, 5th Regt., are at muster at South Framingham. The officers in charge are Capt. J. Albert Scott, 1st. Lieut. Roby S. Cordingley, 2d. Lieut. Harry B. Inman. The men turned out in good numbers.

—The school of expression began its summer season last week. An informal reception was held at the rooms in Boston and the Rev. Dr. Shinn was one of the guests and made a hearty speech of welcome to Dr. Curry, the dean of the school, who had just returned from abroad. Dr. Shinn is one of the chairman of the board of trustees of the school.

—At the monthly meeting of the Garden City Wheelmen, the resignation of Capt. Sumner was accepted, and these new officers elected: Captain, Newton F. Stanley; 1st Lieutenant, Fletcher Robie; 2d Lieutenant, Guy B. Koth. It is quite probable that the club will challenge the Newton Athletic Association to a team race. Both organizations have strong teams, and should a meeting be arranged, it will create considerable friendly rivalry. The club race meet, to be held on the Newton Centre track, tomorrow, promises to be a great success. The events are a novice, and one and two mile handicaps, open only to members of the club.

—A good story is told concerning a Newton family. The family mentioned have a young son who is dressed in the style of little Lord Fauntleroy, that is, was dressed in that style. The son mentioned was the possessor of a head of long curly hair which was admired by all friends of the family. The fourth of July this young son went to his father and asked him for fifty cents for fire crackers, fifty cents for some fire works and twenty-five cents for a pineapple. The father gave him the money but wondered what he wanted with a pineapple. In about two hours the young son returned to his home and it was then discovered that the twenty-five cents for a pineapple was for what the boys call a close summer hair cut. The young son is now shorn of his beautiful curls and his mother is disconsolate.

—To-day Mr. J. J. Johnson finishes removing to Bridgewater, where he has a very fine conservatory and floral farm, and his greenhouses on Thornton street have been taken down, and the house and lot sold to M. C. Higgins. Mr. Johnson was one of the pioneers in the greenhouse business in Newton, and will be greatly missed by many residents, who have for years depended on him for their plants and flowers. He was an excellent citizen, always ready to contribute to local entertainments and charities by contributions of plants and flowers, and his gifts in this way amounted to a large sum yearly. He has done a large business in Newton, but of late years he has found himself cramped for room, and several years ago he purchased a tract of land in Bridgewater, which he has since improved and developed until his business there outgrew his business in Newton and called for his entire attention. His friends wish him all sorts of prosperity in his new home.

—Music in Grace church on Sunday evening: Processional, "The resolute hues of early dawn," Gloria Patri, "The resolute hues of early dawn," Magnificat, "The resolute hues of early dawn," Nunc Dimittis, "The resolute hues of early dawn," Anthem, "How goodly are thy tents," Ouseley Retrospectional, "Go forward Christian Soldier," Tours All saints free.

—Miss C. Blanche Rice, who is spending the month of July at Marshfield Hills, Plymouth, has quite captivated the Newton weekly players produced for their entertainment. A local paper in speaking of the presentation of E. E. Rose's comedy drama "Poverty Corner" last week says, "Miss Rice was the central figure with her bewitching assumption of the part of 'Chick.'"

—A Providence dispatch says that two men, giving the names of James Stewart of Newton and John Woods of Waltham, are under arrest there charged with horse stealing. The men entered Ahearn's horse auction room Tuesday and offered a horse, harness and road cart for sale. Their actions were suspicious and they were placed under arrest. The police say the horse answers the description of one stolen near Waltham last week.

—It is said to be thirty years since such a prolonged dry spell was known in Newton. The lawns are as brown as though the grass was entirely dead, except those that have been faithfully sprinkled, and the gardeners are suffering severely. We hear reports of heavy showers all about us, but they seem to avoid Newton. This week, the militia at Framingham have been wet down twice, with severe showers, but no rain has fallen in Newton, and the only rain of any account we have had in weeks was a slight shower last Saturday, which lasted about half an hour.

—Part of the road bed for the new boulevard, between Hammond and Ward street is completed, and visitors can now get an idea of what the boulevard will look like when completed. It has a reserved space in the centre for electric cars, and a roadway on either side. From Hammond street westward for about half a mile, the boulevard will command a magnificent view of the distant hills, and on a clear day Mt. Wachusett can be seen. This alone will make the new boulevard very popular for sightseers, and sites along this section will be especially desirable for residences.

—George Fletcher, clerk for A. L. Rhyn, was badly injured Thursday morning. He had been to deliver a bundle and was climbing down Franklin street on a bicycle. Just after turning into Centre street he collided with a heavy team and was run over, either because he did not see it in time or through some fault of the driver. He was picked up in a nearly unconscious state, bleeding from the nose and mouth and it was at first feared that his injuries were serious. An express wagon that was passing carried him home and so many doctors are out of town that it was some time before one was found in Dr. Seales. A careful examination showed that no bones were broken, and although badly bruised and shaken up, it is not thought that any serious results will follow, but the young man had a very narrow escape. The bicycle, which cost $150 some months ago and belonged to Mr. Rhyn, was evidently run over by both wagon wheels, as it was crushed and bent all out of shape, and is probably beyond repair.

—A cooling drink, orange ph'sph'te, Hahn's.

—Mr. J. R. Williston of Hunnewell hill, who has been quite seriously ill, has recovered sufficiently to be moved, and has gone to Nahant with his family, where they have taken a cottage for the summer.

—An open air service will be held at the North Evangelical church next Sunday evening at which an address will be delivered by Rev. Temple Cutler. All are invited.

—A short time ago a reporter on one of the local papers was told by a Newton barber that a carpenter well known here had met with a bad accident. It turned out that the whole story was false and was given as a reporter mentioned as a joke on the carpenter. In consequence of the item being published the carpenter lost several good jobs, something he could not afford to do. The laugh may be on the barber, as a lawyer has been consulted and has said the carpenter has good cause for suit. It is a misdemeanor in New York state to furnish false news and is punishable by a fine. It is a pity the law is not in effect here in Massachusetts.

The City Water.

Newton is more fortunate than surrounding towns and even Boston, as so far no restrictions have been placed on the use of city water, and the water board hope to get through the dry weather without any trouble, although of course there is no water to waste.

The amount of water pumped daily is now 2,300,000 gallons, a greater amount than ever before, and the pumps have recently been worked eleven hours daily instead of ten. The new addition to the water supply is some of it already available, and it will all be by October first.

The satisfactory supply is largely due to the covered filter basin and reservoir, which has been a greater success than was expected in keeping the water pure and wholesome.

The street watering carts and the lawn sprinklers are used as much as desired, and it is hoped that the supply will continue to be adequate for all needs.

The Charles river is lower than ever before, and at Crehore's mill their well has given out, for the first time in 70 years, and they have had to use city water the past few days in mixing their pulp.

The Newton & Boston Street Railway Company have made a contract with T. Stuart & Son for a deep well, as the brook on which they depended for water at their power station has given out.

Boston's water supply is so low that restrictions have been placed upon its use, and the same is true of many other cities. Some good heavy showers are greatly needed in this section.

Newton Savings Bank.

The trustees of the Newton Savings Bank met on Tuesday, 17th inst., and declared the usual semi-annual dividend at rate of four per cent. per annum, after carrying to the guaranty fund the amount required by law.

The increase in deposits incidental to the recent quarter season was about $50,000. The large majority of depositors were wage earners. Others put their money in the bank for straight investment, not knowing what else to do with it. Now and then a woman brought the remains of her Atchison at $5 a share with determined face and a few forcible remarks.

Those who watch the progress of this institution will be interested in the official statement issued July 9, in comparison with that of one year since, as given below:

Undoubtedly the greatest collection of thoroughbred and draft horses ever seen on the American Continent, are the 400 horses of the Adam Forepaugh Shows. They form a veritable horse fair in themselves and they are only an incidental feature, of the greatest exhibition ever offered in the patronage of an appreciative public. They will be here on July 25.

Bicycle Races Saturday.

The Garden City Wheelmen, the banner cycling organization of the city, will hold a race meet open to club members on the Newton Centre track, Saturday afternoon, July 21st, at 3.30 o'clock.

The program is for three races, and as a large number of entries have been received it will be necessary to arrange trial heats, so that five events will be contested.

Without a doubt this will prove to be the largest cycle race meet ever held in Newton, and as the public is invited to be present the success of the affair is assured.

Following is a list of riders for each event and the handicaps:

One quarter mile novice 1st heat, J. J. Goodwin, F. Robie, E. M. Armstrong, C. S. Sumner; 2nd heat, W. Pratt, C. H. Seelig, F. Johnson, N. F. Stanley, H. W. Crowell. The first two men in each heat to qualify for the final, which will be the third event.

One mile handicap, W. M. Pettigrew, scratch; J. J. Goodwin, 40 yds., W. M. Morse, 55 yds., F. Johnson, 70 yds., H. W. Crowell, 80 yds., C. S. Sumner, 100 yds., H. W. Pratt, 115 yds., E. M. Armstrong, 130 yds., C. H. Seelig, 150 yds.

Guernsey says, "The man who fails to get something of substantial happiness out of the twenty-four hours, is stark mad!"

He may not cut any capers, or froth at the mouth but a lunatic he is all the same!

But "Captain" Winslow had no fear as she took command of her squad of twenty-five at the Fitchburg depot that Wednesday morning, July 11th, and through the courtesy of Mr. Watson, G. P. A. Fitchburg road, Messrs. Cummings and Hanley of the Central Vermont and the Lake Champlain Trans. Co., and Delaware & Hudson officials, mustered her loyal forces for one of the most picturesque trips any captain could undertake. At 10.30 a. m. the private car on the Green Mountain Flyer held a jolly company of New England Press women representing many literary interests of New England.

With bright anticipations the party was in jolly mood, and "all play and no routine of work" was to be the reversed order of things until their return to the Hub again.

The merry members chatted and smiled and laughed and exclaimed at wayside beauties and historic interests until a startling incident changed the current. A man entered the car! However, nobody faints and he proved to be a friend and gentleman, Mr. E. C. Tuttle of Rutland. Mr. Tuttle presented the compliments of 30 members of the Vermont Press Association, who with their wives joined the party in special car from Rutland on to Burlington. Hon. D. J. Foster had kindly planned a carriage drive about the city of Burlington to show us its beauties and the electric street railway management also courteously tendered its cars, but rain prevented acceptance, and on arrival we drove directly to the Van Ness House, which is finely located and is the largest hotel in the state.

An early ride next morning revealed beauties of Lake Champlain and of mountain peaks the storm and night had hidden, and the city was charming with its stately homes and its beautiful shaded streets; its University buildings on College Hill are magnificently located and command admiration. On the park in front of the University is a bronze statue of Lafayette (who laid the corner stone of the main building in 1825). Of course the monument to Vermont's grandest hero, Ethan Allen, attracts the tourist to its shrine. The base bears the word "Ticonderoga," and on its capital stands a heroic statue of Allen, as he appeared demanding the surrender of the fort, in the name of the "Great Jehovah and the Continental Congress."

Seven miles south of the city at Shelburne, lies the great stock farm of Dr. W. Seward Webb of Vanderbilt fame. It comprises 3500 acres, under superb cultivation and it is said a mansion is soon to be erected to cost $3,000,000.

One would judge it might be fairly comfortable, but there are essentials greater than money for a home.

The doctor may possess them all for he is counted an excellent citizen and neighbor.

At 9 o'clock, July 12th, the Steamer Reindeer pushed out from its moorings with a large party bound for the Isle La Motte. The Vermont Press club had in its ranks as guests many state dignitaries, half a dozen ex-governors, the present incumbent, and Gov. elect Woodbury and wife, and all were under the genial leadership of Col. C. S. Forbes of St. Albans assisted by Messrs. Thayer, Hubbard and Tuttle. Swinging our past Juniper Light and then northward past Ports Kent and Jackson on the left, Carleton's Prize and Providence Island on the right, and touch at Bluff Point, N. Y., to tell them "the Campbells are coming!" in the gloaming, then out and up the lake so near Smugglers Harbor and the Hero's and Crab Island, where were buried the sailors killed in the battle of Plattsburg, on that September day of 1814, and land at beautiful Isle La Motte discovered in 1609.

Cordially received by Hon. and Mrs. Nelson W. Fisk and their island friends, the visit was a most enjoyable one, although the landing was made in a down-pour, and so carriages flew back and forth between the wharf and the delightful stone mansion which is the ancestral home of the Fisks, a dear, rambling, picturesque old manor, which like some across the sea, has been kept up and added to, generation after generation, until it is equal to great demands, and charmingly quaint within. A hedge of holly hocks excited admiration, and an old-time garden in riotous bloom; the chamber where British officers slept the night before the battle of Plattsburg; the stories of revolutionary days; rich carvings of ancient mahogany four-posters with their dainty muslin draperies and valances; rare and curious embroidery; clusters of wild flowers gracefully disposed; the modern touches in music room and study; such ample provision for so large a company and the swift transformation from an intended lawn party to a house party of such dimensions and yet so hospitably entertained; all left its impress, to be long held in pleasant memory. Then the friends were transported back to the Reindeer with several of the Fisk party joining the number, and enjoying the cruise among the islands of Northern Champlain.

Arriving at Bluff Point, the gateway of the Adirondacks, and that royal Hotel Champlain to dinner, which was superb, which after receiving ample justice, was followed by a literary and musical entertainment. Among many happy things that evening was Miss Elizabeth Hamilton's singing and Mrs. Saline Joy White's witty speech.

Miss Winslow's recitation of "Sugar-off Time" and "So it seems to me were charming, and it was whispered that James Whitcomb Riley would need to guard his laurels, or a New England woman would lead the Hoosier state. But the happiest hours must end and farewell was said to this magnificent hostelry with its perfect appointments, its grand scenery in every direction, its idyllic walks and drives and—its talented manager, Mr. O. D. Seavey, of the Ponce de Leon, Fla. May his shadows never grow less, and may he indeed discover life's elixir!

Heighs, up and away, (like the perpetual motion discoverer), to the steamer for Port Kent and Au Sable Chasm, the miniature Yosemite.

Ah, that impetuous river, Au Sable,

from the mountains of the south, rushing and tumbling over the rocks in beautiful Rainbow Falls; then hurrying downward through devious ways, creeping under tower-like cliffs, rushing in dark places where the sun never shines, finally emerging from gloom into the broader, willowy way, and after many a twist and turn mingling with the quiet waters of Lake Champlain.

Up and down and in and out, the procession winds through this wonderful "The Walled Banks of Au Sable," now peering into the Devils Oven, now shuddering past Hell Gate and from it rising heavenward in fancy upon Jacobs Ladder.

On and on, not stopping for even a sip from His Majesty's Punch Bowl, but glancing into the delicious depths of the Fernery and standing with awe in the shadow of the lofty Cathedral towers!

It is so wonderful: these solemn cliffs rising skyward for more than a hundred feet almost shutting you away in this narrow pass, where the sky seems but a ribbon of blue!

Yet in the crevices of the rock, loving not fearing, the mulberry flower and the dainty blue-bell laugh at the grim mother who nourishes them in their beauty!

That "river of sand," shall we ever forget its lesson? Lunch on board the steamer, then goodbye to Port Kent and back to Burlington, truly the "Queen City," where with mutual good wishes and having canonized Col. Forbes as a saint the parties separate; the Vermont friends going to their homes and the N. E. W. P. A. leaving for Westport Inn, on the other side Champlain. By many a reef and point and harbor and island, past Fort Cassin of 1814 fame; beautiful Cedar Beach with its camp life and ideal summer rest; its canoes and the pretty girls who "man" them so gracefully; past "Scotch Bonnet" which has lost its bending plumes of cedar, into the lovely harbor of North West Bay, in the glory of the sunset glow and the restfulness of Westport Inn, kept by Mrs. O. C. Daniell, a gentle white-haired lady who makes her guests comfortable and happy.

A night's rest and delicious breakfast and the watchword, "up and away," is in force, and the party boards the Chateaufort, bound for Fort Ticonderoga, which has so much of legend and history and intense interest, even today. A little later the train on the Delaware and Hudson takes the party to Baldwin, where they board the Horizon with genial Captain Harris in command. He loves and tells many a pleasant story of this enchanted Lake George. J. Fenimore Cooper named it "Silver Water," and entranced by its beauty as we glide over its sparkling surface, bold headlands, grand mountain peaks, lovely islands are presented to view and their names conjure legends of romance, of peril and of beauty. Ever present and looming in grandeur is Black Mountain, monarch of the Lake. How glorious must be the autumn with the mingling of maple and birch and pine in the "sacramental mystery!" Ah, "Queen of American Waters," to have known thy charms is to have lived; to have missed them is a loss not lightly to be borne.

"As in a boat I rock and swing
By summer scenes enraptured,
No lake the old world poets sing
Has so my senses captured."

Saratoga, yes, and Dr. Perry smiling and escorting the party to that most notable of great hotels, the United States, one of the largest in the world. Such spacious rooms, with miles of parlors and verandahs, such luxury of comfort on such gigantic scale. But of Saratoga and its delights I need not tell you. You have all been there; know its music, its flowers, its parks, its famous springs, its race course and its society which is of the wide world.

Our stay was full of pleasure and we left our generous host with regret. Among other courtesies Dr. Perry tended the party a comfortable dinner and there were four Newtonians in the number.

Off again with "baggage checked for Troy," where, just as a side issue, steamer is taken for Albany and return and later train for Boston, via Hoosac Tunnel route. The Berkshire hills and the beautiful Deerfield valley, the mountain streams, the farmland, the quiet restful beauty of our own New England—and—Boston. After all, is it not a good place to come back to, even after this delightful trip?

The Lead Trust.

The operations of the white lead trust offer another example of the great need and great benefit to ourselves of high tariff. This trust is exporting its products to Europe and selling them there at 3 cents a pound; but sheltered here behind a tariff of three cents and having choked domestic competition it is able to exact from American consumers about twice as much per pound. It is greatly helped in this discriminating against Americans in favor of foreigners by the drawback provisions of the McKinley act. The trust imports crude lead on which the tariff is two cents, and when the white lead is sold here the tariff is of course charged up to the consumer; but when exported 99 per cent of the duty is recovered by the trust and so the foreigner gets his lead without a duty added. And that is the way we encourage high prices for ourselves and low prices for Europe.—Springfield Republican.

Obituary.

[Mrs. Anna R. Lattimer, July 8, 1894.] In the promotion of superior spirit, her friends lose a choice companion. Of a rarely intellectual nature and habit, cultivated by lifelong application to the best literature, and association with master minds she was indeed "a liberal education" to all who fell within her influence. Her cordial and cordial hospitality was extended to all, and she surrounded her home with an element of cultured thought, worthy of comparison with the famous Salons of Paris. But to us who loved her, the thought of her longed for re-union with her honored husband, mitigates the grief which will arise, and we know that "to depart and be with Christ is far better." Who knows but that her practiced hand may find its best employ "beyond."

Nothing Strange.

Intelligent people, who realize the important part the blood plays in keeping the body in a normal condition, and nothing strange in the number of diseases that Hood's Sarsaparilla is able to cure. So many troubles result from impure blood. That the best way to treat them is through the blood, and it is far better to use only harmless vegetable compounds than to dose to excess with quinine, calomel and other drugs. By treating the blood, with Hood's Sarsaparilla, scrofula, rheumatism and what are commonly called "humors," dyspepsia, catarrh, rheumatism, neuralgia, consumption and other troubles that originate in impurities of the blood or impaired circulation, can all be cured.

SORROW OF THE FIRE CHIEFS.

RESOLUTIONS ON THE DEATH OF HENRY L. BIXBY OF THE NEWTON DEPARTMENT.

The Fire Chiefs' Club has passed the following resolutions on the death of Chief Henry L. Bixby of the Newton fire department:

Whereas, it has pleased the all-wise Providence to remove from this club, by the hand of death, our esteemed brother, Henry L. Bixby, therefore, be it

Resolved, that, through divine dispensation, we recognize the frailty of life and the uncertainty of human existence.

Resolved, that, in the departure of our brother, this club has met with a grievous and irreparable loss.

Resolved, that, in our sorrow and grief, we cleave to the consolation that our loss is his gain.

Resolved, that, in strict adherence to his duty as a fireman, he has bequeathed to this club a most valuable and acceptable example of consecrated devotion to his calling.

Resolved, that, while we mourn his death, he has left indelibly engraved upon the tablets of our hearts and memories a perpetual reminder of his unswerving loyalty to duty and intrinsic worth as a man and brother.

Resolved, that words are but meagre expressions of the feelings of sorrow and sadness that enshroud this club.

Resolved, that we extend to the family of our departed brother our warmest and tenderest sympathy in this, the hour of their sad bereavement.

Resolved, that these resolutions be spread upon our records, and a copy of the same be presented to the family of the deceased.

L. P. WEBBER, President,

THOMAS W. HOGCH,

JAMES E. HOPKINS,

W. C. DAVOL,

Committee.

These resolutions have been beautifully engrossed by Capt. Bartlett of engine company 1, Boston, upon six leaves of heavy ivory board, bound with silk ribbon into book form. On the outside of the cover appears the words "In Memoriam" at the top, with Chief Bixby's full name as a centre line in old English lettering, beneath which is a statement, in script, of the meeting of the club and its unanimous action. On the back cover is a medallion, a fac-simile of the chief's insignia of office.

The resolutions themselves have been copied so carefully that the work looks like the best of copper plate printing. They were delivered to Mrs. Bixby by Chief Webber of Boston, personally, Wednesday.

Thousands of new patrons have taken Hood's Sarsaparilla this season and realized its benefit in blood purified and strength restored.

LANDING OF THE PILGRIMS.

When the sound of creaking cordage
Ceases and the gangway's down,
O'er it troop the folks from Sweden
To a land to them unknown.
Ask what place they want to go to,
"Vanta-gota-Minne-sota!"
Smiling girls with yellow hair,
Dash of red in either cheek,
Blue eyed, plump and very fair,
Scarlet lipped, expression meek—
Lord! Since Sweden's sent her quota
I "vanta-gota-Minne-sota!"
—Philip L. Barker in Chicago Record.

WALTZED HER AWAY.

All society was agreed upon one point—that for me there were but two suitable fiancées—my cousin Gontran, the duke de Lannis, and the Duke de Courtalin.

I saw him—at the ball of the De Fresnes. He did me the honor to dance three times with me, and I went home absolutely intoxicated with joy. But the joy was of short duration, for the next day he said to his brother, who told his sister, who told me:

"It seems that I am to marry my cousin Marceline. Last evening I was literally thrown into her arms. Out of pure goodness of soul I took pity on the poor little schoolgirl and danced with her three times. But there must be no more of it. I have not yet had enough of life. Besides I know of nothing more ridiculous than marriage between cousins."

But that was not all. He also said to Robert, "I saw her in evening dress last night for the first time, and she is so thin."

That night, after Gabrielle had told me all this, I disrobed before the mirror and studied my poor little shoulders with their great hollows and had a fit of weeping. Mamma came in the middle of it.

"My angel, what is it?" She took me in her arms.

But I could not speak. The tears choked me. "My treasure, you pain me. Speak, dearest."

Then, to reassure her, I managed to say between my sobs: "It is because I am thin, mamma! Gontran, last evening, thought I was so thin!"

Thereupon mamma began to laugh. She told me that at 17 she was much thinner than I, and she assured me very solemnly that I would certainly develop.

That winter of my first season mamma took me to a dozen great affairs, but they were occasions of mourning and sorrow, for Gontran was not there.

He did not want to marry. He even told me so. I did not know then that this was by order of my mother.

One day about 4 o'clock in the afternoon—it was the second day of June—mamma came into my room with a look on her face that was new to me. "My child," she said, "my child."

She had no need to say more. I understood. All the evening before at the Prince de Yearn's M. de Courtalin had been with me, and the next morning his mother had told mamma that her son knew of nothing more beautiful than my face.

Mamma tried to make me listen to reason. If I refused him, I threw away a splendid chance. The Duke de Courtalin was the mark at which all the maternal guns were pointed. Great name, great position, great fortune.

For me, I had but one word to oppose to all these just and proper remarks—Gontran! Gontran! Gontran or the convent, and the most severe convent at that—Carmel.

M. de Courtalin was perfection. I listened to his praise all the afternoon and hated him. The more he was eulogized the more I turned from him. With Gontran I could be quite at my ease, for he never impressed one with his superiority. I knew but little, but my ignorance, compared with his, was erudition.

Mme. de Courtalin had called to ask my hand for her faultless son. I do not know what mamma said to her after my refusal. I only know that I was left for awhile in peace.

And where was Gontran through the long summer? Making a tour of the world very quietly and quite at his ease.

I learned afterward that this also was mamma's doing; that when he was in Japan he had brought me a number of lovely little things, placed in a tiny case that bore my name. The case had been sent to mamma, but I had never seen it.

All that year one name was sounded in my ears—Courtalin, Courtalin, always Courtalin. He had all the virtues under heaven. My determination began to weaken, I say it to my shame.

After all, what advantage there was in being a married woman! Absolute freedom would be accorded me. Then the thought of being a duchess was not displeasing.

All winter mamma displayed perfect taste and exquisite sweetness. She never urged, never tormented me. I know, however, that she said to her friend, Mme. de Nelly: "My dear, she will yield before the 20th of June. It must be."

On that date we left Paris for Aix-les-Bains.

And I did not continue to say no with the savage energy of last year. I only awaited Gontran's return. I knew that he would reach Paris on the 2d or 3d of April. The following day he would certainly come to see us.

And so it happened. He called about 2 o'clock, before mamma had quite completed her toilet. I was alone. I ran to him.

"Ah, Gontran, how happy I am to see you!"

And I kissed him without ceremony. He kissed me in return, was very much affected and began to speak such gentle, kind words that my heart melted. He found me a new creature. I was no longer thin. I had grown taller and fuller.

But just then mamma came in, then papa and then my brother George. An odious conversation regarding the merits of English and French boats followed—how the French boats made better times, how the food on them was so much finer, and so on. It was so enjoyable! It was not until three days after that we met him again, by accident, I think he was no longer himself. He was icy. His good morning was icy; the shake of his hand was icy; his words icy. He was awkward and embarrassed. He quickly lost us in the crowd and reappeared no more.

I returned to throw myself once more into the arms of my mother and cry out, "Yes; I shall marry De Courtalin."

How many times between that and the 17th of May did I repeat the operation! It came to be a settled thing that no sooner did mamma see me appear than she mechanically opened her arms to receive her daughter, crying, "Yes; I will marry Courtalin!" and soon after, "No; I will not!" But the "I will not!" became more and more rare.

M. de Courtalin was a model of tact, of kindness and of resignation. He waited, always in black, always buttoned, with inexhaustible patience. Mamma was invariably engaged with Mme. de Courtalin.

At last the 17th of May arrived. It was tacitly understood that upon that evening I would say yes to the patient lover, and the engagement would be formally announced before all the world. I was restless all day and glad when 11 o'clock in the evening found mamma and me at the home of Mme. de Vernieux, who was giving a great ball.

As I entered I became suddenly aware that I was the center of attraction. A line had formed itself on either side, and little ohs! of surprise and ahs! of admiration went deep into my heart.

M. de Courtalin came up to us. He wanted to ask my hand for all the waltzes, for all the quadrilles, for all the evening, for all my life.

I answered: "Later on. Presently. I feel a little fatigued."

My eyes roamed listlessly over the ball room and perceived, with a start, two other eyes, fixed, settled upon me—two eyes that I knew well, but found it difficult to recognize, so big had they grown in that concentrated, wondering look.

Suddenly their owner arose and turned toward me. A glance aside showed me Courtalin slowly and laboriously making his way toward me from another corner. My cousin looked at the same time and saw him.

Then it became a race between the two men. Gontran intrepidly cut through all the waltzers, but he reached me before Courtalin. He came up to me precipitately. He caught my hand; he put his arm about me.

We danced, wildly, furiously. What a waltz! He said to me: "I love you; I love you! You are grace and beauty itself. There is not another woman here half so lovely! And it is I who shall marry you! Do you hear? I, and none other!"

"Ah, my dear, if you had not come tonight, my engagement to M. de Courtalin would have been officially announced tomorrow."

"Yes, but I have come, and I am here holding you fast. I have discovered that there is not another woman like you. I love you!"

"Slower, slower, I pray you. I am falling. Everything is turning around. Stop!"

"No, no; we shall not stop. If we stop, your mother will stop us, and I have more to say to you—much more. Swear that you will be my wife."

"Yes; I swear it. But enough—enough!"

He held me so tightly, and his face was pressed so close to my face, his lips so close to mine, that I grew suddenly faint and slipped down into his arms.

The next day our engagement was announced. The waltz had created a scandal. It was imperative.—Milwaukee Sentinel.

A Story Lincoln Told Grant.

Chronologically the talk had come to Grant's journey east to assume general command and his first meeting with Lincoln. "Did he give you his impression of Lincoln when he returned from that interview?" I asked.

"Not exactly," answered Colonel Grant. "You see, I was with him at the time."

"In Washington?"

"Yes. In Washington and in the White House, with him and Lincoln."

"Is it true that Lincoln quoted a story about Captain Bob Shorty and the Mackerel brigade from the Orpheus C. Kerr papers to your father at that meeting?" I asked.

"Very likely, though I don't remember. The story that I do remember hearing him tell my father that day was about Jocko. Jocko was the commander of an army of monkeys in a monkey war, and he was always sure that if his tail was a little longer he could end the monkey war. So he kept asking the authorities of the monkey republic for more of a tail. They got other monkey tails and spliced them on his. His spliced tail got too long to drag after him, and they would it around his body. Still he wanted more, and they wound his spliced tail about his shoulders. Finally it got so heavy that it broke his back. Mr. Lincoln applied the story to the cases of generals who were always calling for more men and never did anything with them."—McClure's Magazine.

Shrubs For Shady Places.

The fragrant bush honeysuckle does finely in such a place. The flowering raspberry grows in the greatest abundance wild in hollow and moderately damp places in woods. Snowberry and red Indian currant bushes do nicely in shady places; so do common privets. Most all kinds of trailing honeysuckles thrive in the shade so far as growing well is concerned; so do trailing roses like Wichuraiana nitida and lucida grow in the shade. In dry, somewhat shady ravines barberry bushes, sweet fern and wax myrtle are at home, and in the better ground mahonia shrub, yellow root and evergreen euonymus should thrive. Then there are mountain laurel, wild rhododendrons, blueberry and upland huckleberry bushes, maple leaved viburnum and lots of others.

Odd Fellows' Memorial.

On June 24 the Newton Lodge of Odd Fellows and the Tennyson Lodge of Rebekahs assembled in goodly numbers in the Universalist church at the morning service. The church had been tastefully decorated by a committee of Rebekahs, and the visiting friends occupied the body of the house. The pastor, Rev. Ira A. Priest, who is himself a member of the order, took for his text, 2 Kings 4:34:

"And he stretched himself upon the child; and the flesh of the child waxed warm." After showing that nothing resulted when Elisha sent his staff by proxy, and that life returned only in answer to the personal touch of the great prophet himself, the conclusion was drawn that only life begets life. The topic that naturally suggested itself here was the touch of life. And then from statistics and by illustrations drawn from personal experience it was shown that Odd Fellows by their active interest, heart-felt sympathy and living presence had brought light and hope and life and peace into many homes where the members were struggling under the shadow of grief and despair. They do visit the sick, relieve the distressed, and educate the orphan. But their benefactions are necessarily confined to the members and families of the order. These members are selected because of their intelligence and integrity. Without this select fold dwell the ignorant, the vile and the vicious. But they too are human and most needy. The great fraternities as such have no place for them. But there is an organization wide as earth and high as heaven that hears the bitter cry of the unworthy. It was shown that the Church of the living God merits all encouragement that it may more fully visit the forgotten, relieve the despondent and by the touch of life save the lost.

Compulsory Arbitration.

A Boston lawyer, Samuel J. Elder, while unwilling to see compulsory arbitration adopted generally, says it should be brought in to settle these railroad disputes with labor. Such is the dependence of the public upon uninterrupted transportation facilities, and so far has government gone in regulating traffic, that in his opinion government would be justified in compelling roads and employees to submit their disputes to a public tribunal and then compelling either party to abide by the judgment, even to the point of using force. Mr. Elder goes on to suggest that railway employees should be held up to a contract as close as that which binds the crews of ships, and he is unable to see why a general railway strike should not be treated as a case of mutiny as a strike on shipboard would be treated. Edward Everett's paper, the Boston Commonwealth, regards these suggestions as wise and practical, and it goes on to say: "This is not all the case, however. There is another side to it; the side of the employer. And if the workman is to be held to his duty of labor in the general interest, the employer must be held to his duty of fair treatment and no oppression."

Give us a Rest.

The American Wool and Cotton Reporter, a Republican paper, undoubtedly represents the general public sentiment when it says: "Unjust and unreasonable as many features of the new tariff bill now appear, the prudent statesman and the leading business men of our country would doubtless say if the bill is enacted, 'Give the new law a fair test!' There are other great questions which the country must very soon settle, and which the party now in power seems not to clearly comprehend, so that should the Republicans succeed in regaining a majority in the next Congress, the popular feeling against further tariff legislation might be so great that any attempts to legislate in that direction would be indefinitely delayed. When, then, it is wise for all business interests directly concerned in the coming change to adjust themselves as rapidly as possible to the new scale, hoping to receive from it some degree of advantage, some solid gain."

Mr. Younghusband: "O, doctor, come at once. My wife is suffering awful torture." Doctor: "Is it so bad as that?" Mr. Younghusband: "Yes; she has such a cold she can't speak."—Hygiene.

He: "Another tramp, wasn't it, at the door, asking for something to eat?" She: "No; it couldn't have been, for he worked himself into a rage because I wouldn't give him anything."—Inter-Ocean.

Officer in Minnesota: "What did you shoot that horse for?" Shooter: "Sh! Gittin' even with the Pullman in Chicago." "Why, what?" "Stranger, th' owner o' that hoss 's been a haulin' crossties for a new railroad."—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

Beware of Ointments for Catarrh that contain Mercury, as mercury will surely destroy the sense of smell and completely derange the whole system when entering it through the mucous surface. Such articles should never be used except on prescriptions from reputable physicians, as the damage they will do is ten fold to the good you can possibly derive from them. Hall's Catarrh Cure manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, O., contains no mercury, and is taken internally, acting directly upon the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. In buying Hall's Catarrh Cure be sure you get the genuine. It is taken internally and made in Toledo, Ohio, by F. J. Cheney & Co. Testimonials free.

Sold by Druggists, price 75c. per bottle.

For the relief and cure of a cold in the head there is more potency in Ely's Cream Balm than in anything else it is possible to prescribe. This preparation has for years past been making a brilliant success as a remedy for cold in the head, catarrh and hay fever. Used in the initial stages of these complaints Cream Balm prevents any serious development of the symptoms, while almost numberless cases are on record of radical cures of chronic catarrh and hay fever after all other treatments have proved of no avail.

The Porous Plaster Stamp is out of Date. Haughty lady (who has just purchased a stamp)—Must I put it on myself? Postoffice assistant (very politely)—Not necessarily, ma'am; it will probably accomplish more if you put it on the letter. (Newark Ledger.)

and vital force follow loss of flesh, or emaciation. These come from impoverished blood. Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery enriches the blood, stops the waste of strength and tissue, and builds up healthy flesh. Nasty Cod liver oils add fat but not wholesome flesh. Thin, pale, puny and scrofulous children are made plump, rosy and robust by the "Discovery." They like it, too.

In recovering from "Grippe," or in convalescence from pneumonia, fevers, or other wasting diseases, it speedily and surely invigorates and builds up the whole system. As an appetizing, restorative tonic, it sets at work all the processes of digestion and nutrition, rouses every organ into natural action, and brings back health and strength.

If it doesn't benefit or cure, in every case, you have your money back.

For a perfect and permanent cure of Catarrh, take Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

CONDITION OF THE CHARLES.

The condition of the Charles River between Waltham and Lower Falls calls for the immediate attention of the State Board of Health, and of the local boards, as it is dangerous to the health of all those living along its banks. The water has been drawn down by the Waltham companies owing to the dam at that place, until it is some four or five feet lower than usual, and many acres of mud flats are exposed, which give out a very disagreeable odor. The health of all living near the river can not fail to be seriously affected, and an epidemic of malaria is the least of the evils to be expected.

The long drought has lessened the supply of water, but there would be no trouble were it not drawn off for manufacturing purposes. The Waltham papers say that the Boston Manufacturing Company is responsible for the low water, and as Waltham is the most seriously affected in the matter it is strange that the board of health of that town does not take some action. Waltham in the vicinity of the Moody street bridge and above could rival the famous smells of the city of Cologne, but judging from the gingerly way in which the Waltham papers refer to the matter, they are afraid to make any very active campaign against the company responsible for the nuisance. The condition of the river above Upper Falls, shows that there would be plenty of water, if it was not drawn off, and besides the danger to the public health, it is a serious injury to Auburndale and Waltham.

The river in summer is the great attraction of those places and a great amount of money has been expended by the boat clubs and private residents for the enjoyment of the river in summer. Public parks have been started also, but they are shorn of all their attraction by the odors from the river, and canoeing has become a dangerous pastime. The public interests are far greater than those of any private company, and the latter should not be allowed to endanger the health of the hundreds of residents along the banks, and injure the value of property. If the local boards of health cannot take action, then the state board should be appealed to by both Newton and Waltham.

THERE are all sorts of opinions about the Newton Boat Club's action in opposing the desire of the Boston Athletic Association for a new bridge across the river near the former's boat house, and the Boston Herald gives one view in an editorial which will be found in another column. It may be said, however, that whatever are the reasons for the Newton Club's action, it is hardly envy of a rival, as the Newton Club has all the members it can accommodate, besides a large waiting list. The Newton Club has held its standard so high that it is considered an honor to be a member, while the Boston Athletic Association has had an ambition to have as large a membership as possible. As a home organization the Newton Club ought to be entitled to favorable consideration from Newton people, and its motives interpreted from a friendly standpoint, as they probably would be were their position and the reasons therefor better understood.

BROOKLINE is agitating the laying of asphalt in its business streets, as the dust and dirt from macadamized streets is a great objection to its use in front of stores and the cost of keeping the streets clean is much greater than where asphalt pavements are used. Boston also has found that asphalt pavements are much preferable in streets that are the centers of travel and will probably follow the example of other cities, which long ago gave up the use of macadamized streets in the heart of a city. It would be a good idea for Newton to consider the question of asphalt-paving the streets in the business section, and a good example of the superiority of such pavements is furnished at the Newton depot, where the yard is easily kept clean even in muddy weather, and the dust is easily removed. The extra cost would probably be more than offset by the lessened expense for street cleaning and repairs.

STATE politics are very quiet in Newton, at present, and there is little evidence of any lively interest in the coming campaign. The storm center in the state seems to be the Barrett-Hayes contest in the Lynn district, and the fight promises to be a very lively one. Senator Lodge's declaration in favor of Hayes and against his old ally is regarded as lacking somewhat of our junior Senator's usual shrewdness, and it is not regarded as having much benefited Mr. Hayes. People in Massachusetts do not take kindly to the idea of being dictated to, and it is hardly wise for any man to advertise too openly his desire of being considered the "boss" of Bay State politics. There are rumors also of a movement against the selection of Senator Hoar, and a combination is said to have been already made to that end, which will bear watching. In spite of his rather narrow partisanship Senator Hoar is an honest man, and that is a good deal more than can be said for the Senators from some other states.

In the August number of The Forum, there will be three striking articles treating of the three recent startling manifestations of crime—the Great Railroad strike and its Causes; the Assassination of Carnot; and the Police Revelations in New York. Discussions of these subjects are grouped under the general title, "The Sentimental Dealing with Crime and its Increase," and following these is a fairly startling review of the recent world-wide increase of crime, by Mr. Henry Charles Lea, of Philadelphia. These make one of the most noteworthy groups of strong and timely articles that have ever appeared in our periodical literature.

THE FRANKLIN SENTINEL is trying the experiment of publishing a semi-weekly edition, but it will meet the fate of all other local papers that have had such an ambition. It will find that the new scheme doubles the expense without making any addition to the income. There is undoubtedly more fun in the semi-weekly, but newspapers have to have something more solid than that to make a living for their proprietors.

THERE is a good deal of interest taken at the successor of Mr. Randlett as assistant chief of the fire department, but so far no candidate has been prominently mentioned, although there are said to be a large number in the field. It is very important the new chief should have an assistant as thoroughly in sympathy with him, as he was with the late Chief Bixby.

THE surveyors are busy on Washington street making plans and estimates for the widening of the street, and will be ready to report when the City Council resumes its sessions in the fall. The need for this improvement is an urgent one, and it ought not to be much longer delayed.

Quaint Old White Meeting Houses.

In the midst of the prevailing craze for odd and bizarre styles of architecture it is pleasing to come across a plea for the simple and homely buildings such as contented our forefathers. William Henry Bishop, in an article in The Century, in which he gives his experience while searching for a summer home in upper New England in the form of an abandoned farm, says: "Two small white meeting houses show their Christopher Wren steeples complacently. Time has been when all these white country meeting houses alike seemed to freeze the imagination with their coldness, but times change, and we with them. The charming grace and lightness of design that many of them possess have been recognized. Their whiteness is a refreshing spot amid the greenery—in short, they are coming back into favor again, with the many other nice old fashioned things of the period, and the invasion of gothic chapels that succeeded them had better look well to the security of its domination."

Two Scenes.
Scene One—Schoolroom. Small Boy (as the rattan falls gently on his hands)—Wow, wow, o-o-ough! I'm killed! Boo-hoo! Me hands are tender, teacher! Boo-oo-oo!

Scene Two—A Field. Same Small Boy (same day)—Soak der ball in harder, Chimmy! Why doncher put some speed inter it? Let'er go! It don't hurt me hands a bit! Slug'er in!—Boston Traveller.

Legislation In Ohio.
In Ohio a bill to enable women to vote at all school elections passed the senate on April 10 by a vote of 21 to 6. As a similar bill was defeated by only a few votes in the house, it may be called up again and passed. The Dayton Herald and Ironton Republican endorse the measure.

During the summer season Krupp supplies his workmen with cold coffee and vinegar at intervals through the day, and such of the men employed in connection with the puddling works receive one-eighth of a quart of brandy.

Cornelle was a very stupid talker. Descartes rarely spoke when in company. Addison could not converse at all; neither could La Fontaine, while Dryden's conversation was slow and dull.

The only half cent probably which was ever coined was a piece now in possession of Jesse Rogers of Newbury, Mass. It is an old Massachusetts coin presumably cast as an experiment.

HOW GRANT BECAME A SMOKER.

An Incident That Caused the General to Be Overwhelmed With Cigars.

"My father," said Colonel Grant, "tried to smoke while at West Point, but only because it was against the regulations, and then he didn't succeed very well at it. He really got the habit from smoking light cigars and cigarettes during the Mexican war, but it wasn't a fixed habit. When he left the army and lived in the country, he smoked a pipe—not incessantly. I don't think that he was very fond of tobacco then, and really there was always a popular misconception of the amount of his smoking. But he went on as a light smoker, a casual smoker, until the day of the fall of Fort Donelson. Then the gunboats having been worsted somewhat, and Admiral Foote having been wounded, he sent ashore for my father to come and see him. Father went aboard, and the admiral, as is customary, had his cigars passed. My father took one and was smoking it when he went ashore. There he met by a staff officer, who told him that there was a sortie, and the right wing had been struck and smashed in. Then my father started for the scene of operations. He let his cigar go out naturally, but held it between his fingers. He rode hither and yon, giving orders and directions, still with the cigar stump in his hand.

"The result of his exertions was that Fort Donelson fell after he sent his message of 'unconditional surrender,' and 'I propose to move immediately upon your works.' With the message was sent all over the country the news that Grant was smoking throughout the battle when he only had carried this stump from Foote's flagship. But the cigars began to come in from all over the Union. He had 11,000 cigars on hand in a very short time. He gave away all he could, but he was so surrounded with cigars that he got to smoking them regularly, but he never smoked as much as he seemed to smoke. He would light a cigar after breakfast and let it go out, and then light it again, and then again let it go out and light it, so that the one cigar would last until luncheon."

—From an Interview With Colonel Frederick D. Grant About His Father in McClure's Magazine.

Not an Unusual "Lapse."
Certain physicians who are ardent specialists are accused by their brethren—the general practitioners—with seeing everything through the eyes of their specialty and of jumping to conclusions. This note from an alienist's or "nervous specialist's" diagnosis of a certain case is cited:

The patient Q. is of unsound mind; suffers singular lapses of the memory. There is manifested, moreover, a curious correlation in these lapses between ideas of persons and ideas of money. Thus it is noted that on several occasions he has totally failed to recognize his creditors when he has met them on the street.—Youth's Companion.

He has been in every country and every port in the world. Mr. Thompson said that he regarded Honolulu as the most beautiful place he had ever visited until he came to China. Ever long he will be thought, beat them all for scenic attractiveness. A compliment of the character from one who has travelled so extensively ought to tickle Newtonians and assure them that there are places even in Yankee land that are worthy of their unstinted enthusiasm. Mr. Thompson has returned to his ship, now at Norfolk, and departs soon for China. Ever long he will be placed on the retired list of the navy.

UNANIMITY OF OPINION.

BUT ONE EXPRESSION: "THEY ARE THE LARGEST AND BEST."

There is at hand the always reliable evidence of the largest and best of the daily newspapers, which are upon the exchange list of this office. Wherever the Adam Forepaugh Shows have exhibited thus far this season the newspapers of this class, as well as the smaller ones, express an astounding unanimity in their praises of the Adam Forepaugh Shows. Judging from the tone of these papers, in which may be placed implicit confidence, the Adam Forepaugh Shows are the largest and best of tented exhibitions and are simply unparalleled in their extent and in their merit, while the prohibition of all sorts of peddling, gambling, and every manner of offences to law and good taste, and the compulsory correct and gentlemanly deportment of all attaches, place the Adam Forepaugh Shows absolutely beyond criticism. They will exhibit here on July 25.

"What's the matter that there is no dinner ready?" asked the labor leader.

THE BONNY DOON.

I passed beside the bonny Doon
At midnight and alone
And heard it tell the listening moon,
In saddest undertone,
The loss and sorrow by it known.

"What though in spring my birks grow sweet,
In summer shade my tide?
What though the years unchanged repeat
Their single at my side?
No more to me the hard returns
Who sang my banks and braes;
No more the lips of Robert Burns
Are vocal in my praise."

"Oh, bonny Doon!" said I, "take heart
And learn this truth of me:
Immortal as his heavenly art
The bard himself must be.
Though never to your banks and braes
His wandering steps return,
The sweetest singer in your praise
Is still your Robert Burns."

Yet, as before, beside the Doon,
At midnight and alone,
I heard it tell the listening moon,
In saddest undertone,
The loss and sorrow by it known.

A MADMAN'S MYSTERY

I have seen a newborn baby in its crib, with its eyes wide open, peering into the life just opened to it. I have heard persons wonder what the little brain is thinking about, what it sees and how its new surroundings affect it. I know what life seems to a newborn child, for I was but as a newborn child when I awoke to life, and opening my mouth cried out involuntarily to attract the attention of the woman at the window.

She arose from her chair and came hurriedly to me.

"Ah," said she in a sweet, low voice. "At last you live. Rest now. Try to sleep. You will get well."

I did not understand her words at the time, but they filled me with a satisfied feeling, a desire to close my eyes and sleep. I lay half unconscious for some time, teaching myself object lessons, and soon I could name the various articles I saw about me. But, try as I would, I could not remember my name or anything about myself.

I became strong enough to get up from my bed, and to sit at the window, and to look out upon the snow covered ground, and to watch the gray and the blue in the ocean, and to walk about the room.

One morning I determined to see whether the nurse knew anything about me, so I called her to my bedside.

"Do you know my name?" I asked her.

She looked at me in surprise and wonder.

"No," she said.

"Well, do you know anything about me?"

She looked even more surprised.

"Nothing," she said, "nothing, except that two months ago some of our people found you on the beach apparently dead. We have nursed you back to life. Don't you remember anything about yourself at all?"

I had to admit that I did not.

"Well, will you tell me where I am?" I asked her.

"You are in the town of Astine, on the coast of Nova Scotia," she replied.

"Astine,"—the word seemed familiar to me—"Nova Scotia" also familiar, but I could not tell when or where I had heard the words before.

About a week after this occurred my nurse came to me and told me that the village doctor had said that I could go out for a walk. She offered to go with me. I gladly accepted her companionship, and together we walked out into the cold, fresh, life giving air and down toward the ocean.

We came upon an old ruined building.

"What is this?" I asked her.

"The ruins of the house where the Ayraults lived."

"The Ayraults—have you ever mentioned that name to me before?" I asked her suddenly.

"No," she answered. "Why do you ask?"

"Oh, I do not know, except that the name sounded familiar to me, as if I had heard it many, many times. Why, even when you spoke it I thought—how foolish of me—that you had spoken my name. Who were they?"

"They lived here for many years in this old house. The son and mother were drowned years ago. The father, I believe, is still alive. He lost his mind, and every now and then is seen wandering about here looking for his son, who, he says, will return to him some day. Why, look there! There he is now!"

But I heard no more than the woman said. I but saw an old man, white haired, with wild eyes, staggering toward me.

I looked at the sea.

Once more the world became dark. And then—maybe I dreamed, maybe it was a picture I saw, maybe it was my memory come back to me.

"I stood at the window looking out upon the sea, partly hidden from my sight by a fine white mist, which I could plainly see coming in, sweeping along before the wind over the water up the hill toward the house. The sea roared sullenly, and the waves dashed angrily up over the rocky beach, occasionally the spray leaping higher than the mist, suspended for a second above it, sparkling in the moonlight.

"I opened the window, and as I did so the thick mist, which had now come up over the hill, came pouring into the room. Despite the cold I stood entranced, amazed, looking out upon the wonderful beauty of the night. The wind grew fiercer, the sea dashed the foam from its lips up above the blanket of the white mist. The moon for a moment shone down upon it, transforming it into so much fiery silver. Then the foam sank again down deep into the mist.

"Suddenly there came a boom, followed by a glare across the heavens.

"I knew what that meant.

"A vessel ashore," I cried, "in that surf, on those rocks. God have mercy on those on board."

"There came a loud knocking at my door.

"Who is there?" I asked.

"It is I," came the voice of my father.

"Open, I beg of you."

"I went to the door, raised the latch and admitted him. My mother was with him. They were fully dressed.

"'Boom!' came through the white mist from the vessel pounding upon the beach.

"Yes, now I could hear the vessel as she beat her brains out.

"Then the heavens were illumined by a second rocket.

"Did you hear? Did you see?" asked my father.

"Yes," said I, "it is a vessel ashore."

"We must go to that vessel," he said resolutely. "They will need our help. You will go?"

"Yes, I said.

"And I, too," cried my mother.

"My father tried to dissuade her.

"This is no woman's work," he said. "But she would not be frightened.

"I will die with you," she said resolutely.

"Out into the storm we rushed, down to the beach, where the frightened villagers stood looking vainly out toward the doomed vessel.

"They ran toward us as we approached. They would not go out in the boat, they said—it was death.

"At last," said my father, "you will help me get the boat into the surf?"

"But they would not even help get the boat into the surf.

"It is death you are going to, Ayrault. We will not help to murder you," they cried.

"Then stand aside," and together we three pushed the boat into the surf, through the rocks, to the open sea, then jumped into her and put off over the fiercely rolling waves. My mother and myself took the oars. My father stood at the bow looking out ahead.

"Come back," came a faint echo from the shore.

"A great wild wave came crashing down upon us.

"Nearer and nearer!

"The boat cried out, almost, it seemed, like a human being in terror.

"The wave struck the boat.

"The cold water rushed over my head.

"I went down—down.

"I struggled to the surface.

"For a second I caught sight of my father and mother as they struggled in the embrace of death.

"I could see their eyes turned at the last toward me.

"Come," their eyes cried to me. "Come."

"I tried to cry out to them. I tried to cry to them to wait for me; that we would die together in each other's arms.

"I struggled to get nearer to them."

Then something seemed to snap in my head, and once more I stood on the beach.

"You are faint?" she said.

"My father," I muttered, "where is he?"

"Your father!"

"Yes, yes, the old man, where is he?"

"See, he is stumbling along there."

Like one in a dream, he came slowly toward us.

Terror and pleasure stupefied me. His eyes rested on the snow in front of him. Then suddenly he raised them to mine.

He threw up his arms; he started forward; he cried out, a cry of peace, happiness, a cry from a soul flowing over with exultation.

My father's eyes looked deep into mine. My father's arms were about my neck.

"At last," he cried, "at last, my son, back to me, and now rest."

And with a low moan the old man—Ayrault, my father—fell back upon the snow and was dead.

And now often my father and my mother come to me when the moon shines in upon my couch, and we sit together in the moonlight, and he tells me the old story; how during his lifetime my mother and I had come to him to minister to him; how I had promised to come back to him so that he might rest. I ask him every night if I am to live on forever, but he answers not.

So we hold each other's hands, and the spirits in the moonlight sing to us, and we are happy.

I, even I, am happy, though they do keep me locked up here in a cell night and day.—New York Sun.

Fifty Feet of Rainfall Annually.

There is always more or less guesswork concerning the amount of rain that falls during any storm period. Throughout the United States the amount that falls on any one day rarely exceeds one inch. There are certain portions of the globe, however, that are frequently, and others only occasionally, deluged with water. On the southern slopes of the Himalaya mountains, at an altitude of 4,500 feet, 610 inches of rainfall have been registered in a single year, of which amount 147 inches (12 feet 3 inches) fell in the month of June. At a meteorological station in latitude 18 degrees, near the western boundary of Hindustan, the average rainfall for the 15 years ending with 1893 was 254 inches. In the northwestern part of England, at an altitude of 1,300 feet, the average annual rainfall is 146 inches, 111 inches in excess of the mean for St. Louis, which is but 37 inches and a fraction.

The wonderful record given above is still more phenomenal when we consider the fact that all the moisture the atmosphere is capable of holding at any one time would cover the entire surface of the globe to a depth of less than four inches should it all be instantly precipitated.—St. Louis Republic.

Could Wait Too.

"Is anybody waiting on you, madam?" inquired the floorwalker.

"Yes, sir," retorted the middle aged matron fiercely. "I reckon they're waiting to see if I won't go away without staving for the 17 cents in change that's a-comin' to me!"—Chicago Tribune.

A PIONEER SKETCH.

A TOUCHING TALE OF A BURIAL IN THE WILDERNESS.

The Lonely Grave of Little Ruth, Which Was Cared For by Some Kindly Hand For Thirty-five Years—A Mother's Awful Grief Almost Alone In the Forest.

In the year 1829 a steady stream of immigration was flowing into the territory of Michigan. The ever restless people of the east had heard wonderful stories of the abundance of game and great fertility of soil to be found in the new territory, and the sturdy, adventure-some farmers of rocky New England were pushing their way westward, with the hope of finding the El Dorado of their dreams.

Detroit, at this time, was a sight to behold. Its streets were thronged with the covered wagons of the immigrants. Hunters and Indians, half breeds and soldiers were mingled in a chaotic mass. Among the great throng of home seekers that left Detroit on the 2d day of May, 1829, were James Harris, his wife and year old baby. Young Harris had put all of his earthly possessions into a covered wagon, and bidding goodbye to friends and relatives had joined that endless stream of home seekers that were pushing their way into the wilderness of Michigan, hoping by their energy and perseverance to build up a home for themselves and an inheritance for their children.

The road westward from Detroit followed an old Indian trail, and by constant travel the mud had become so deep that it was almost impassable. Many of the pioneers left the old road and struck off into the wilderness, making roads for themselves.

Among this number was James Harris, and all went well for a few days. After camping one night the wind suddenly shifted to the northwest, and a cold rain set in. This was the eighth day after leaving Detroit. The company that they had begun their journey with had gradually dropped off, and for two days they had traveled alone, alone in the great wilderness, unprotected save what protection the canvas covered wagons gave them. Was it any wonder that as they listened to the howl of the wolf and the hoot of the owl they became a little homesick? Harris had made a great fire of dry brush, and while it was burning brightly the family had gone to sleep. From this sleep the young mother was aroused by a sharp, hoarse cough from her baby. She immediately awoke her husband, fresh fuel was thrown on the fire, and as it blazed up the young mother peered anxiously into the face of baby Ruth. One glance at the little drawn face resting on her arm, and the mother knew that the baby had that dread disease, the croup. Everything was done for the little sufferer that the distracted parents could do. They were young and inexperienced, and all night long they fought for the life of their little one, but all in vain. Just as the first glimmer of light appeared in the east the spirit of baby Ruth took its flight. The young mother, wild with grief, pressed the form of her darling to her breast, moaning and saying over and over again, "Baby is dead!" She refused to let her husband take the little one from her. She would never give it up; no, never! All that day they remained in camp. Toward evening the wife became calmer, and standing near the wagon with the babe in her arms she saw her husband dig the little grave, and when it was finished a rude box was made, and she tenderly laid her baby to rest, with her own hands placing it in the grave, and as the dirt rattled down on the lid she fell senseless into her husband's arms.

After filling the grave the young father took two little sprouts of Lombardy poplar that he had in the wagon, setting one at each end of the grave, and cutting the words "Baby Ruth" on a piece of board he placed it at the head of the little mound, and then they resumed their journey. Years passed, and a road was laid near the spot. The poplars grew and became a living monument. The piece of board that had told the little one's name was annually replaced by some kind hand.

Time passed quickly, and May 10 had come and gone 35 times since baby Ruth was laid to rest in the wilderness; the poplars had grown to be trees and stood in a cleared field near the roadside; the surrounding forest had long since disappeared. A board was nailed to the trees with the words "Baby Ruth" painted on it. A carriage was passing by when the driver, an elderly man, glanced toward the trees and saw the inscription. He looked at the trees and at the sign, hitched his horse, made inquiry of a farmer near by as to the meaning of the sign and was told that when he came to the country he found the little grave marked with a rude board, and that he had spared the trees and nailed up a new board. His informant wondered at the emotion of the stranger, who stood with him overnight, but his wonder ceased when he was told the story of baby Ruth as I have written it. The wife and mother had died some two years before. Other children had come to bless her, but she never forgot her firstborn and the little grave in the wilderness. A beautiful monument now marks the spot where sleeps baby Ruth.—Van Buren County Republican.

A Year's Work of the Pasteur Institute.

The annals of the Pasteur Institute for the year 1893 have just been published. They show that last year 1,648 persons were treated for hydrophobia, and that only six of them died of that disease. Of the number mentioned, there were 1,470 French people and 178 foreigners. Among the foreigners were 43 Spaniards, 35 Greeks, 23 English, 22 Belgians, 18 Egyptians, 14 British subjects from India, 9 Swiss, 9 Dutch and 6 Portuguese. Since M. Pasteur commenced to practice his inoculations against hydrophobia 14,480 persons have been treated by his method, and 72 have died of the disease.—London Standard.

—There was a pleasant wedding yesterday on Station street. The contracting parties were Mr. George W. Haffner and Miss Louisa Trent. The ceremony was performed by Rev. Daniel L. Furber, D. D., who married the groom's father, Mr. Valentine Haffner, twenty-six years ago. The happy couple left for Brooklyn, N. Y., in the afternoon. They will be at home in Newton Centre after Sept. 1st.

—It has been several weeks now since the Boston & Albany replaced the cinder sidewalks about the depot with concrete, and citizens find it a very appreciable improvement. The GRAPHIC protested very strongly against the cinder sidewalks when they were being laid, demanding in the interest of the public that our village be given as good depot approaches as the other Newton villages enjoyed. After months of delay the railroad officials have finally taken up the old cinder walks and replaced them with clean serviceable concrete.

—It has recently become a popular thing among some small minded persons here, evidently to satisfy some personal enmity, to circulate stories that certain persons are members of the "A. P. A." Three or four men doing business here have heard of such stories being circulated about them and in two or three cases it has proved an injury to their business. Not one of the parties against whom these despicable rumors have been circulated have ever in any way been connected with the "A. P. A." and they are endeavoring with some success to trace the rumors to their source.

—The repairs on the Mason school cupola are nearly completed. The old bell which was cracked by the heat from the fire was removed Tuesday morning and a new 2200 pound bell, furnished by the Blake Bell Co. of Boston, hoisted in its place. It took six men all day Tuesday and a part of Wednesday to get the new bell in position, and Chief Randlett and his men spent a half day in adjusting it for the fire alarm. The new bell is of fine tone and very similar to the old one. It weighs 400 pounds more than the old bell and is larger and had to be raised a half foot higher so the fire alarm striker would work. The clock is being repaired by the Municipal Fire & Police Telegraph Co. of Newton Highlands.

—The First church has extended a call to Rev. Edward M. Noyes of Duluth, to become their pastor. The action of the church is unanimous in the matter. Mr. Noyes being very much liked the two Sundays in June and July which he preached here while on his vacation east. Rev. Mr. Noyes is a graduate of Yale and took the regular three years' course and a special additional year's course at the Yale Divinity school. After graduating he almost immediately received a call from the church of which he is now pastor, and where he has been for ten years. In that time he has seen the church grow from a membership of 27 to 30. He is of New England birth. It is understood that he has also received calls recently from a church in Springfield, in Chicago and from one other western city.

—The wedding in Grace church this week was remarkable from the fact of so many of the family assisting in the ceremony. Three sisters attended the bride, two brothers were ushers and the father gave the bride away. Thus there were seven persons of the same family who took part in the wedding ceremony. It is not probable that many cases as interesting as this have ever occurred.

—The Somervilles were entertained by the Newton Cricket Club first eleven Saturday on the home grounds, Watertown street, and were defeated by four runs, the score being 88 to 84. The Somervilles are considered a crack eleven, and when the Newtons visited them a few weeks ago the Somervilles defeated them 44 to 10. Saturday they expected to be at least victors, if only by a small score, and were scarcely prepared for the defeat they received. It was a good game, and was watched by many spectators. During the play the Somerville became exercised over a decision of the umpire and called their men from the field, but later sent them back and the game was finished. The batting of Clements for the visitors and Collett for the home team were the leading features, together with the bowling of W. Lyons and Bassett for the home team and Hobson for Somervilles.

—Mr. Stephen Childs of the Newton sewer department tried to get out of the way of the circus parade, Wednesday morning, on Washington street, and was run over by the circus parade, getting it caught in the railway track.

—There are quite a number of cases of measles in Ward Two, but so far no cases are reported in other parts of the city. A few cases of scarlet fever are reported scattered in different wards, but whooping cough is quite fashionable among the young people.

—Miss Johanna Rice of 28 Morse street, who died on the floor of the bath room at her house, Tuesday morning, Dr. Carroll was summoned and found that death had come some hours previously. Medical Examiner Mead, who was called, found that death was due to heart disease. Miss Rice was about 50 years of age and formerly resided in Aliston.

—It is said that there was a prize fight, Monday night, down near the banks of the river, between two young men, a grocer and a butcher, and that three rounds were fought in the presence of forty-five or fifty spectators. The grocer won, and his admirers treated him to soda and cigars, while the butcher sought seclusion with a beefsteak over his eye. The affair was not witnessed by the police, as it was over the Watertown line.

—The thunder storm in this vicinity Wednesday night was not as severe here as in other places, and the lightning did but little damage, striking a house on Brooks street, Newtonville, and another in Waban, but not causing a fire in either case. The rain came down in torrents for a short time, but another and heavier shower came between 8 and 9 o'clock, when a great amount of water fell.

—Wednesday was the first of the dog days, according to the almanac, judging from an old saying we shall now have plenty of rain. Rain on any of the first three dog days means a wet August.

—The circus parade, Wednesday morning, drew out a great crowd of people on the streets and it seemed hardly possible that there could be so many people in Newton. The parade had all the old time features, the steam calliope, the elephants and camels, the many heavily gilded vans, the bands, and a great number of handsome horses, with few ponies and mules, and the usual representation of an old farmer in his cart, with a bundle of hay for feed tied under the cart. The tents were pitched on Watertown and Cambridge streets near the Galen street bridge, and the two performances were fairly well patronized the rain interfering with the evening attendance.

—Miss Harriet Lincoln Holmes and Mr. Olof Wenstrom were married, Monday evening, in Grace church, by Rev. George W. Shinn, D. D., pastor of the church. The church was beautifully decorated with floral pieces. Lohengrin's nuptial march ushered in the bridal party. The bride was attired in a gown of white moire, wore a tulle veil, and carried a bunch of white roses. The maid of honor, Miss Elizabeth L. Holmes, was dressed in a gown of chiffon and yellow silk. She was preceded by two bridesmaids, sisters of the bride, Misses Katherine and Gertrude Holmes. The ushers were Messrs. W. E. Holmes, Frank Holmes, Joseph Fay, Alonzo Weed, Robert Manning and Frank Howe. A reception for the more intimate friends and relatives was held at the house after the ceremony, after which the bride and groom left on their wedding tour. They will return to Newton for a brief visit and then will go to Sweden, where they will make their home. The wedding presents were very handsome and valuable.

—Wednesday morning, what might have been a serious accident, happened at the corner of Central and Church streets, about half an hour before the circus parade. Harold Jackson of Newtonville was driving up Church street in a canopy top carriage, which contained his sister, a cousin, and Miss Ellen Jackson of Newton. The horse was frightened by the giving way of a part of the harness, and started to run. The driver tried to keep him up Church street but he insisted on turning down Central and the result was the carriage was overturned. Fortunately the horse stopped, but all the occupants were caught under the carriage and it had to be lifted off before they could get out. Miss Ellen Jackson was dashed by the shock but was found to be unhurt, and the rest of the party escaped with rather painful but not very serious cuts and bruises. Dr. Seales was fortunately at home and attended to the injuries of the party, after which they were taken home in a hack. The carriage was badly wrecked and one wheel was crushed. Had not the horse stopped when the carriage overturned the results might have been very serious.

—Considerable amusement was afforded the bystanders in front of the postoffice one evening this week, a German band trying to play several well known airs with the help of three young fellows who sat and by sucking lemons. At last the leader of the band was compelled to retire with his assistants.

—Miss Carrie Coppins, Miss Rose Loring, Miss Sally Cutler, Mr. N. P. Cutler, Mr. W. T. Coppins and Master Raymond Coppins returned this week from Edgartown, Martha's Vineyard. The party was most successful in their blue fishing and landed thirty-two.

—The Boston Journal had a ridiculous story about young Wright sleeping in the police station one night this week, and his identity not being discovered by the police until after he had gone. The Journal is getting quite a reputation for unreliable news, and there was of course not a word of truth in this story.

—An alarm was sounded from box 18, at 2 o'clock this morning, for a fire in Mr. U. S. Hall street on Newtonville avenue. It was discovered by the coachman, who gave the alarm, and the damage was small. The slaters were at work in the stable yesterday, and it is supposed that they left a fire burning in one of their small furnaces, as it started in the vicinity of their tools.

—The concert given by the choir of Grace church at Cohasset last Wednesday in the town hall was a most successful one and a number of Newton people were present. The choir boys sang in a most delightful manner and received several encores. The choir boys of Grace church seem to be particularly fortunate in having so many entertainments, and Mr. Hamblin has done much to make all the entertainments pleasant ones. After the concert the boys remained at Cohasset, staying at the different houses where members were attending. The choir boys were taken to North Scituate beach where bathing and fishing were indulged in. Later in the day a course dinner was enjoyed at the Mitchell house and it was voted that this was one of the most successful of the kind they had given. The program is given below:

PART I.

IN THE FRIGID ZONE.

A NEWTON MAN DESCRIBES THE CELEBRATION OF THE FOURTH.

To my friends at home:

With the accompaniment of all the "boom" and roar of the characteristic American enthusiasm, I suppose my friends at home have been most gloriously celebrating the day which commemorates the birth of our nation, little thinking, perhaps, that far away under the rays of the "Midnight Sun" a few persons, also full of all the vim and patriotism of American citizens, have likewise done their best to salute the memory of those deeds, the value of which as they rang forth from the interior of Independence Hall in '76 to the time of the now "old" Liberty Bell, have never and will never be forgotten.

I am on board the steamship "Mira," sailing for the North Cape, and about 9:30 p. m. on the night of the 3rd we crossed the Arctic circle off the island of Hestmande, and a few hours later at exactly midnight, the glorious emblem of our country, "the stars and stripes," were run to the mast head, the cannon pealed forth in salute to our national colors, and the happy Americans on board gave vent in three rousing cheers. No one can realize with what delight this sight was witnessed; no one could look upon the smiling faces on deck without feeling the loving regard with which every American gazed on that which best brought to mind the smiling faces of those at home, and no one could say that America and America's greatest day was forgotten.

Fireworks? No. But as one stood on deck with the glowing rays from the "Sun of Midnight" shining through a thin veil of clouds before you, throwing the light of day upon all the northern world, and forming a panorama such as is rarely, if ever, one's opportunity to witness, judgment may be made of how useless any explosive was, and not even those magnificent (?) "falls of Niagara," and all the other famous set pieces so invariably witnessed on Crystal Lake as a close to the day's celebration, would serve to distract the observer for one moment from the beauty, rareness and magnitude of the scene before him.

But we were not content to let nature do all towards our celebration, and, in the twenty-fours of light during the day granted us, one has abundant time to form plans and see to carrying them out, and there is no such urgent necessity of "doing tomorrow what should be done today," unless one is unduly pressed for time.

During the course of the morning, money was easily raised, the champagne purchased, the chairman and speaker chosen, the captain was prepared, and all sat down to dinner. Towards the close of the meal, the chairman, Mr. Lee of Buffalo, N. Y. arose, and in a few words called the assembled nationalities to order, charmingly introduced the subject, proposed a toast, (unanimously responded to), to the success and prosperity of the U. S. of America, and presented the speaker, Mr. John Stevens of Philadelphia, Pa.

On board are represented at least eight nations, and the interest and close attention which everyone paid Mr. Stevens, (though many could only understand a word here and there, and some even none at all), as he delivered his short but eloquent address, was the best of compliments and criticisms which one could pay, not only to the one who so kindly consented to represent his country, but to the country as well.

Mr. Stevens spoke briefly of America's prosperity (of her spendthrift ways however), and of the acknowledged place which, as a new nation, she was gradually and surely gaining throughout the whole world. Of American authors placed by the side of those honored by European nations; of American architects consulted in the erection of the more modern structures; of American engineers on plans of practicability and mechanical skill.

Of course it was an "American" speech, there is no doubt about that, but when Mr. Stevens took his seat he was loudly applauded, and at the close of the little affair congratulations poured in not only from Frenchmen, Russians, Austrians, Germans, Spaniards, Italians, etc., but from Englishmen as well.

Finally our Norwegian captain said a few words, and in closing proposed another toast to the long life of the American people and their republic, and with three rousing cheers the celebration was over.

Now surely it was no "great affair," but it goes to show that wherever a ship sails and a flag is floated, there is always a true-hearted love and admiration felt for the American nation and its emblem, and one may well be proud of a country so universally respected.

Yours respectfully,
H. S. LESSE.

Saturday's Storm.

The thunder storm last Saturday noon was the most severe of the season. The rain came down in great drops, and all the streets were flooded, but a good deal of it soaked in. There was no hail here, though big hailstones were reported in Boston and from along the shore.

There was some terrific thunder and lightning, and the trolley wire of the West End cars on Galen street was struck and ran off the end of the wire in Nantum square with a sharp crack which frightened the people who were just leaving the car and caused a great stampede. A large had to be used to convey passengers until the line was repaired.

Lightning struck a big barn on Woodward street, Waban. It was owned by the Henshaw heirs and used by Thomas Reilly for storing live stock, farming implements, etc. An alarm was sounded from box 521, but the blaze was so dangerous looking that another was sounded from box 85. The fire caught on the roof, and had gained much headway when the department reached the scene. The animals were taken out. Damage $3000.

The barn belonging to George Sibley in Weston, near Stony Brook station, was struck and three large barns were burned with all their contents, causing a loss of $2000. A house was struck in Waltham, and some damage was done in Dedham, mostly by the high wind, which preceded the storm.

A settled rain came along Saturday night, lasting several hours, followed by another one Monday night, and it looks as if the prolonged dry spell was now ended.

Pimples, boils and other humors of the blood are liable to break out in the warm weather. Prevent it by taking Hood's Sarsaparilla.

GARDEN CITY WHEELMEN.

FIRST CLOSED RACE MEET—PETTIGREW MAKES A TRACK RECORD—CROWELL'S FINE WORK.

The first closed race meet of the Garden City Wheelmen was held Saturday afternoon on the Playground at Newton Centre.

The attendance was not as large as expected because of the severest shower just after noon, but the grandstand was well filled, however, with an enthusiastic gathering, who watched the races with a good deal of interest.

The early shower did not interfere seriously with the speed of the track and the heats were run off in good time considering the experience of those entered. Not an accident occurred to mar the pleasure of the occasion.

The first event was called at 3:30 p. m. and the last race was run off at about 5 o'clock.

A good deal of interest centered in the exhibition mile heats by R. L. Rottler of the N. A. A. and W. M. Pettigrew of the Garden City's, the latter establishing a new track record, standing start.

An exceptional showing was made by H. W. Crowell for so young a rider. He won the quarter mile novice handsily, and got second place in both the one and two mile handicap pushing Pettigrew hard for first in both the latter events. The Wheelmen have in him a promising rider.

The summary:

Newton Hospital Notes.

A few persons have contributed towards repainting the interior of the private ward of the Newton Hospital and the work is now in progress.

During the preserving season every family should remember that jellies and preserved fruits are always acceptable gifts at the hospital.

It is suggested that a library of books relating to Woman's Work in the fields of Philanthropy would be very appropriate in the Nurses' Home, such as "The Life of Dorothy Dix," "The Life of Sister Dora" and other similar books. Persons interested in the formation of such a library can confer with some member of the board of managers of the Nurses' Home. Dr. Eaton of Newton Highlands is the secretary of the board.

There were three boys, all under 6 years old, patients in the Hospital last week. One was little Fred, who has been there for so long. The other two had fallen from trees, resulting in a broken arm in one case and in a badly damaged head in the other.

When the upper rooms in the private ward of the Hospital are in order they will be in a few days, they will be as neat and as attractive as those in a first class hotel. One patient who occupied one of the lower rooms awhile ago said he could not persuade himself that he was in a Hospital. Everything was so comfortable and orderly, he kept fancying he was staying at an unusually well kept hotel in the country.

The Allen School.

The West Newton English and Classical School, begins its next school year Sept. 9th, and enters upon its 42nd year in January next. This famous school keeps right on in its prosperous year, in spite of business depression, and was entirely full last year. Its three families where students board having more applications than could be received. Among the students were children of Prof. Sargent of the Harvard Gymnasium, Prof. John L. Stoddard, the famous lecturer, Prof. C. C. Bragdon of Lowell and other distinguished men. Thirteen of the United States were represented besides Cape Breton, Canada, the West Indies, U. S. of Colombia, and South America. The school has drawn its hundreds of pupils from many states, during its existence, has expended over a million dollars in Newton, and has never had a scandal of any kind connected with it. There are many citizens who were attracted to Newton by the fame of this school, as the place to educate their children.

The Messrs. Allen are famous as educators the country over and the influence surrounding the school are of the best, many men of prominence having been educated there and testifying that their indebtedness to the school could not be overestimated, as there they received the upward influences which helped to make them what they are.

The Professional Horse Dealer.

Mr. H. C. Merwin, in his paper, Professional Horsemen, in the August Atlantic, thus sketches the horse dealer:

The horse dealer has the imperiousness of one accustomed to subdue powerful animals; he has, as a rule, the good humor of one who leads a healthy outdoor life; but, with reluctance he it said, these excellent qualities are as nothing compared with the craft and subtlety, with the mists of fabrication and imposture, by which he is enveloped. As to the future state of the horse dealer, I fear that there can be nothing problematic about it, unless indeed Providence has arranged for him a special dispensation. Certainly there is this to be said in extension of his crimes: to sell a horse without lying and cheating is next door to impossible, and therefore lying and cheating are, in some sense, forced upon the horse dealer. We might even regard him, not altogether without reason, as a great public benefactor, as a martyr who sacrifices his own moral character for the good of the community. He is all that stands between us and the decay of a noble industry. We must have horses for use in our business and in our pleasures; in general, it is impossible to raise them for ourselves; in general, also, we should never buy a horse if we knew the whole truth about him; and therefore, as I say, the falsity of the "jock" is a necessary link in the great chain of human activities.

I am led to believe that the dealers themselves, when they reason about the subject at all—which is but seldom,—take precisely the view here stated. They recognize, in a far-off way, the beauty of veracity, but they regard it as something to be expected only of saints and heroes. To the horse dealer honesty is a "counsel of perfection," just as celibacy and poverty are counsels of perfection to the layman who, having no vocation to be a monk, has married a wife and is endeavoring to acquire property. Occasionally, when a dealer does happen to be absolutely honest, he is looked upon by his fellows with a strange mixture of contempt and admiration. "How is so-and-so getting along?" I inquired of an ordinary dealer in reference to one of real integrity. "Not very well," was the reply. "He is a good man and a good horseman," I said. "Oh yes, yes; but the fact is, George is too honest,—he can't sell a horse."

I have sometimes thought—though I suppose the scheme is too repugnant to American ideas ever to be carried out—that there ought to be a caste of horse dealers, marked off like pariahs or like the Egyptian parasitism from the rest of the community. Such a caste could be formed from fellows of the better educated sort. Thus, embezzlers, burglars, forgers, bank cashiers, trustees, and the like, after a short term of imprisonment, might be licensed by the state to set up as horse dealers,—the occupation being at the same time forbidden to all persons unconvicted of crime. This would carry out exactly the fundamental idea of caste which has thus been stated by a high authority: "Caste rests upon the religious idea of an indelible stain resting on certain men, and the social idea of certain functions being committed to certain classes." However, I merely throw this out as a passing suggestion.

"Rides for Invalids."

One of the most beautiful and practical of the charities of Boston is that of "Rides for Invalids," which has been so successfully carried on by the Boston Young Men's Christian Union for the past twenty years,—a branch of charity undertaken only by the Christian Union, and by which the sick and invalid poor of Boston are given carriage rides in the suburbs during the summer, and at all other times during the year when the weather will permit.

Supplementary to this, convalescents and others are given electric-car and harbor-excursion tickets.

Forty-one hospitals and other institutions besides the sick and invalid poor in the many private homes are the recipients of this charity.

The board of government of the B. Y. M. C. Union, in their annual appeal for funds just issued by the special committee in charge make the following statement:

"The demands of the past year have exhausted our 'Invalid Rides' treasury, and the needs of the present season will, without doubt, be greater than ever before."

We therefore earnestly solicit a continuance of the generous donations of former subscribers, and will confidently hope for new supporters of this worthy charity.

All friends are invited to send their donations to William H. Baldwin, President, No. 48 Boylston street, Boston, Mass., and remittances will be duly acknowledged."

The Old High School Building.

To the Editor of the Graphic:

By your leave I want to use your influence to awaken my friends of Newton to a very serious ill; I mean the old part of the Newton High school building. It is unhealthy. It should not be occupied as it is now. The so called ventilation is an entire failure and I warn my neighbors and fellow parents that they are incurring a heavy risk in letting their boys and girls occupy some of the rooms there. I do not need to go into details for the school committee and the teachers know the facts, and the attention of the board of health has been called to them.

The public must take hold of the matter and insist upon its being attended to properly at once. The city council is to blame in not having remedied the wrong some time ago. Now let the citizens say to it that no more time must be wasted in so important a matter.

SCENERY COMPARED.

THE MAIN DIFFERENCES BETWEEN ENGLISH AND AMERICAN.

The One Is Everywhere Affected by Man and Art—The Other Is Primeval and Virgin—Luxury May Suit English Scenery, but Not So With Us.

Having lately visited England after a long absence, my mind since my return has been busy with the subject of the relations between our scenery and that of the old world. I visited a dull part of Hampshire. On leaving the house where I was staying it was necessary to get up to an early breakfast to catch a train. Two young soldiers, very pleasant and friendly fellows, who went away at the same time, were in the cab with me. Reference was made to the scenery, and one of them, who had been in America, said, "You Americans may not always say you admire England, but in your hearts you know there is nothing like it." I looked out of the cab window at the flat and very rolled out landscape, cut up into squares and plots by iron fences, which, however, with its sparse oaks standing here and there, was not without a classic grace, and thought of the fresh and magic outlines of the Virginia mountains. But the hour was much too early and too drowsy to allow of any expression of dissent. It is an old question, that between the scenery of the two worlds. It is simple enough, however, with an obvious answer. Here it is primeval and virgin nature; there, nature affected by man and art.

The difference between European and American trees and woodlands is significant of this. Early in September an acquaintance took me to look at a remarkable oak on his place in Essex, which he said had been thought by some persons to be a relic of the ancient British forest. This oak, which was not very high, threw its powerful arms straight out in all directions over a wide space of ground. Certainly such a tree could not have stood in an aboriginal forest. There would not have been sufficient sun to produce so great an amount of leafage, and there would have been no room for such a vast lateral extension.

It so happened that only a few months before, in June perhaps, I had seen in Tennessee a good deal of a forest which was almost virgin. The trees went straight upward to a great height, the boles being clean of branches a long distance from the ground, and the leafage scant, except at the top, where it received the sun. I rode into the middle of this forest. The trees were often so close together that it would have been hard for a horse to go between them, and my horse followed the bed of a stream which was so shallow that it scarcely more than wet his fetlocks, the rhododendrons being very thick on each side of me. Halting in the midst of the level floor of the forest, it was an impressive scene which I found. The pale, lofty trunks stood everywhere parallel, and with a stately decorum and regularity, except where, half way up the adjacent mountain side, some tumbling trees, leaning at angles against their surrounding fellows, which had arrested them in falling, varied the universal propriety with a noble confusion, the gray trunks looking like mighty fallen pillars of a ruined temple.

It is true that our scenery is not very rich in its associations of human history. This source of interest we have here only to a slight degree. But the landscape has its own history. Is it not well to consider that history? Is not scenery made more impressive by the study of those sublime changes which have prepared the world which we see, and may not the disclosures of men of science, so far as the unlearned are capable of comprehending them, be brought to the service of the sense of natural beauty?

Another contrast there may be in the scenery of the two lands. There is this to be said of English scenery—it is suitable to the luxury and comfort of English country life. It is appropriate to the English fleshpots. There are plenty of country houses throughout England in which material comforts are of the best, and which at certain seasons contain much agreeable company of both sexes. I had some experience of such a house in Surrey. The library was excellent. For a wonder the weather was good, the ephemeral British sunshine remaining all day on the southern walls and really lavish among those flowers of the garden you do not know by name. Easily detained by such an existence, you are not inclined to anything more active than some kind of pleasant reading and are likely to lose your place at that, while your gaze rests upon the hills to the west. To such a life and such a state of mind the vague, soft aspect of the Surrey hills was most suitable—two impalpable ranges of hills, alluring to the eyes. Essences they seemed rather than substance or matter, and unreal, save in their gentle emerald coloring. And they were always lying there, quivering as in a dream—a mirage which did not go away.

If there is an agreement between luxury and English scenery, my sentiment is that, on the contrary, luxury does not suit our scenery. An iron foundry, strange to say, does no harm. A forge, a factory by the side of a pond filled with water lilies—I have now in mind the New England landscape—these are not unsuitable. But a fine house in some way is, and my sense of incongruity extends as well to those mansions which a friend describes as Queen Anne in the front and Mary Ann in the rear. Architecture, both private and public, should be such as is suited to the local requirements and history. A white spire, for instance, marking such a church as New England farmers have built for generations, what an eloquent object in a wide and undulating view!—E. S. Nadal in Century.

A medical man has found out that dismal weather has a bad effect upon the reasoning powers as well as upon the spirits. He says his deductions made on cloudy days often prove to be faulty.

MENTAL IMAGES.

Material Pictures Contemporaneous With Thought Imposed Upon the Brain.

"A man conversing in earnest," says Emerson in his essay on "Nature," "if he watch his intellectual processes, will find that a material image, more or less luminous, arises in his mind contemporaneous with every thought, which furnishes the vestment of the thought."

This power of forming mental images appears to vary in strength among individuals to a considerable degree. Naturally we should expect to find it powerful in poets and artists. Charles Dickens has himself told us that he actually "saw" his creations as he wrote, and M. Taine mentions a painter who only looked at an object while he sketched its outline and was able to fill in the colors from the image of it in his mind. On the other hand, there are people of equal intelligence who, being unable to see such mental images themselves, have doubted their existence, and Mr. Francis Galton has shown that habits of abstract thought, such as men of science and philosophers indulge in, are apt to weaken the capacity of forming mental pictures.

Mr. Kirkpatrick of Winona, Minn., an experimental psychologist, has made a series of observations on this phenomenon with the help of his classes. The scholars were asked to write down just what came into their minds when certain familiar words, such as "book," "tree," "church," were called out, and the answers were carefully investigated. He found that the majority of the students formed distinct images of the objects corresponding to the words, and the rest formed indistinct images, with a few exceptions, who seem to have indulged in philosophical abstractions. The word "book," for example, called up visions of a Bible, a dictionary, a novel, in all but a few scholars, who thought of "food for the mind" or "the thoughts of some person." The word "tree" was represented by some kind of tree, more especially the illustrious cherry tree which George Washington cut down. The word "church" usually evoked a picture of some church in the vicinity, but some of the hearers thought of a "religious organization." It is evident from his results that most people are "visualizers" in thinking, while a few are "nonvisualizers." The tendency to form distinct images was very conspicuous among the female students, and in both sexes it reaches an abnormal development about the ages of 14 and 15, or during the period of adolescence, which, it has been otherwise observed, is also one of exceptional good health and rapid growth. The tendency is further checked or fostered by the occupations in life.—Cassell's Magazine.

The Clock Winding Snake.

In Persia there is a kind of snake which is known to the natives as the clock winding snake. It derives its name from a peculiar buzzing noise which it makes that resembles the winding of a clock. These snakes are perfectly harmless and frequently glide in and out of the houses, no attention being paid to them by the natives. During a visit there several years ago I was attracted one morning by an unusual twittering of birds, and on looking up saw about 20 sparrows on the top of a wall, all jumping about in an excited manner.

At first I was at a loss to understand the cause of such a commotion, but presently I heard the peculiar buzzing of the clock winding snake and in a minute perceived the reptile crawling along the wall, making directly for the birds, which appeared to be fascinated and made no attempt to fly away. The snake glided in among the birds, and choosing one to his liking deliberately seized it in his mouth and swallowed it. I picked up a stick, and after killing the snake cut him open and extracted the sparrow. After about 10 minutes' exposure to the sun the bird got up, and in a few minutes more flew away apparently unhurt.—St. Louis Globe-Democrat.

Rosebery's Foresight.

The foresight Lord Rosebery displayed in arranging his matrimonial plans is illustrated in the following anecdote: Shortly after he had returned from his continental tour he was one of a house party at Mentmore, a lordly pleasure house which Baron Meyer Rothschild had built for himself in Buckinghamshire. One evening, at dinner, the conversation turned on the exquisite decorations of the room. Lord Rosebery's observation to his next neighbor, by way of epilogue to the conversation, was, "Yes, this place would suit me excellently." When, seven years later, he had married the daughter of the house and was the owner of Mentmore, his friend, happening to meet him, reminded him of this observation. Lord Rosebery replied with assumed gravity, but with a telltale twinkle in his eye, "Well, of course you know that the unexpected always happens."—San Francisco Argonaut.

A Philanthropist.

"What is the subject of your lecture?" inquired the editor.

"The Cause of Hard Times and How to Cure Them," replied the gifted orator, "and as the object of the lecture is in its very nature purely philanthropic I will ask you to be generous in the matter of free notices. By the way," he added hurriedly, "I forgot to fill a blank in this advertisement. I will attend to it now."

And he took the copy and filled the blank after the words, "Price of admission," by inserting the simple characters, "$1."—Chicago Tribune.

Increase of Suicides in Austria.

The increase in the number of suicides in Austria, which is stated to have been very marked in the sixties and seventies, fell off in the 10 years 1880-90. Since the latter date, however, it has again become noticeable. In 1891 the number of suicides was 873, in the following year it was 903, and last year it reached 1,005.—London Times.

Land Deal at Wellesley Hill.

Arrangements have been made for developing a large tract of land in Wellesley Hills owned by the Judge Abbott estate, and containing some 200 acres. Carter, Peabody & Co., were the brokers in the purchase made, and have charge of the land.

For a number of years the estate of the late Judge Abbott has owned a large parcel of pasture and woodland lying east of Forest street, and a short distance south from Washington street, opposite the railway station. It has recently purchased 11 acres more, the land and the buildings on it, situated between the Abbott land and Stanwood street.

The whole is about to be developed on plans by Aspinwall & Lincoln. The large house now standing across the end of Stanwood street is to be moved to one side, and that way extended at a width of 50 feet through the Abbott estate, other streets leading from it and from Forest street being laid out. On the east, is a private way called Maple place, on the corner of which and Washington street is the new Wellesley High school. The Wellesley club has a bond over the land to be laid out.

This development opens up a pleasant territory close to the centre of the village, and sloping gently toward the south, the highest point being rocky and picturesque and prettily wooded. The lots will contain from 10,000 to 25,000 feet each. The owners will probably build several houses at once.

BOOKS AND MAGAZINES.

The last of Frank Bolles's papers, "August Birds in Cape Breton," has the place of honor in the August Atlantic, at the right hand of the hostess, so to speak, for it follows immediately upon the installment of Mrs. Deland's "Philip and his Wife" at the opening of the number. In the third place stands Susan Coolidge's "The Girlhood of an Autocrat," the story of the famous Empress Catherine of Russia. "The College Graduate and Public Life," is by Theodore Roosevelt. The life with which the deals is that of politics, a practical aspect of which is discussed in Mr. A. H. Washburn's paper, "Some Evils of our Consular Service." Something is told of the great work of Cardinal Lavigne in Northern Africa by William Sharp. By way of contrast there is a paper on "Professional Horsemen," by H. C. Newlin. Sidney Lanier's letters come to an end, and the rest of the number is filled out with short articles and stories, giving in all a more than usual diversity of attractive reading. Houghton, Mifflin & Co., Boston.

Tyler to go for Records.

Saturday afternoon, July 28, Harry Tyler will attempt to lower the two existing bicycle records for the mile at the Waltham bicycle track, which now holds the world's records. He will ride both the flying and standing miles, against the marks made by Julian P. Bliss on this track, July 14. Bliss made the flying mile in 1m. 54.4-58. The standing mile he rode in 2m. This last record was previously held by Tyler himself, and he is very anxious to regain it. He will be paced by three tandem teams manned by Peter Berle and A. B. Rich, who ride under a special professional sanction; Eddie McDuffee and Lonnie Warren, and George Cutter with L. Berle will be the other two teams. A. W. Porter will try for a class A mile, flying record now held by Butler at 2m. 12-55, and Butler will try for the two mile record. There will also be three races, all class A events, a third mile, a mile, and a two mile lap.

The other day a very modest but absent-minded young woman went to a store for some flour. She gave the clerk what she supposed to be a neatly folded and ironed pillow slip. The clerk emptied one scoop of flour, and it went through to the floor. Just then a horrifying discovery was made. What had been taken for a dainty little sack had two outlets, and each outlet was trimmed with embroidery. The bashful young clerk fainted, and "sweet sixteen" fled as a bird to Stocker's Knob.—Floyd (Va.) Press.

Neal Dow told the Montreal prohibition convention that in Maine "a barrel of liquor had not been imported for years, and that the liquor traffic is unknown in Portland." In the same issue of the Portland Argus containing this statement, the police court record showed that 21 persons were fined in one day in Portland for drunkenness. It reminds us of the sole government agent at Bangor, who, in his annual report, apologized for the smallness of his sales by saying it was on account of keen competition in the business.—Boston Beacon.

What Did He Eat.

There comes a good story from Monte Carlo, from that holy of holies, the salon wherein are the traite et quarte tables. Just as the cards were being shuffled for the commencement of play a gentleman deliberately counted out 12 1,000 franc notes and placed them on the black without even taking the precaution of insuring them. It was "playing the limit," and a bystander remarked:

"Rather a bold play, sir."

"Well," said the player, "I dreamed last night that I saw this table exactly as it is now, and on the first coup black won."

The cards were dealt for the first coup, and black won. A suppressed "Oh!" from the bystanders greeted the announcement, "Red loses," and then from across the table came a woman's voice:

"What did you have for supper last night? Do tell me!"—New York Herald.

Quick Transit.

"Did you ever stop to think," said Meandering Mike, "about this world's turning on its axis once every 24 hours?" "Course I have," said Plodding Pete. "It's mighty fast travel, so fast that it don't seem worth while tryin' to improve on it. Er feller that ain't contented ter jes' sit under an slide with the earth at that rate of speed is so dog-goned hard ter satisfy that his opinion ain't worth list'nin to nohow."—Washington Star.

turned by mail unless stamps are enclosed.

THE WALTHAM News thinks it is absurd for the GRAPHIC to intimate that "disease is imminent because of the low state of the river" and also asserts that "there are no festering mud banks exposed to the action of the sun." We are willing to grant that the News really believes this statement, but the writer ought really to take a little stroll along the Charles, he would not have to go far even in Waltham, to find plenty of mud banks exposed to the sun, and giving off an odor that is very unpleasant, to say the least. If he had walked over the Moody street bridge in Waltham, last week, he could have smelled the odors, if he has a nose. He says that there are no decayed fish, but no one has asserted that there was, but the mud that is exposed, composed of deposits of the filth that has come down the river, are even more dangerous to health than decayed fish would be and much more offensive to the smell. The B. M. Co. may have paid for their water rights, as the News asserts, and before the banks of the river were built upon, there was no danger in their drawing off all the water
they desired, but for a manufacturing company to make a nuisance dangerous
to health along several miles of a river, in a thickly settled community, is something that should not be permitted in those enlightened days. The people owning property along the banks have rights that are as sacred as those of any corporation, and when the river is converted into a nuisance their property is seriously damaged. Waltham may pretend it likes the smell out of regard for the corporation responsible for it, but Newton people do not like to be driven from their homes every summer merely because a Waltham corporation wants to save a few dollars. If there is no other way of reaching the trouble, the banks of the river ought to be placed by law under the control of the state board of health.

THE National Senate has been the central point of interest, this week, and Senators have furnished plenty of sensations. Senator Gorman's angry attack on the President, Senator Hill's handsome defence of him, Senator Caffery's (of Louisiana) statement that the sugar plantations, judging from Senators' actions, were chiefly in Maryland, New Jersey and Ohio, all showed how the Senate bill was made up, and how the trusts have manipulated matters, and how openly their representatives do their bidding. But as long as great fortunes can be made out of tariff legislation such scandals must be expected. As long as a small duty will put millions yearly into the pockets of a trust, the corporations will see that men are elected to look out for their interests, or they will buy up the men who are already elected, and it makes little difference by which party name a senator calls himself. The scandals of the present session ought to drive such men as Gorman, McPherson and Brice out of public life, but if the men have only made money enough for themselves or the interests they represent, they will have little trouble in being re-elected judging from past history.

THE Boston correspondent of the Springfield Republican, who knows what is planned on the inside in politics, says that "the house of Draper, which has flourished like a green bay tree since it entered politics with its exhaustive methods," seeks still further exaltation, and hopes to be represented in the United States Senate. The talk of the badness of Senator Hoar's eyesight, and of the necessity of choosing a new man to succeed him, with the mentioning of such names as Greenhalge, Haile, Long and so on, are merely feelers put forth by the politicians who have already made up the slate, for which the people will be allowed to vote later on. Senator Lodge, it is said, would like the honor of being Senior Senator, and then the firm of Lodge & Draper would have complete control of the party in the old Bay State. Whether this is one of the warm weather rumors, or pretty serious fact will be read in due time, but the prize is a tempting one, and this is the day of the political hustler, who generally carries off the honors. As things go in other states, Gen. Draper has all the qualifications necessary for a seat in our House of Lords, as he is several times a millionaire.

THE Waltham Free Press says that the Boston Manufacturing Co. which owns the water rights on the river, had reduced its taking of water to a minimum, owing to the hint of the Waltham papers. But judging from the low water of last week, the company only took such action when it was forced to do so, as there was only water enough in the river for the "minimum." The State Board of Health has been appealed to by boating men and by residents along the river, and members of the board were given a chance to take in the foul smells

from the exposed mud flats, last week, and perhaps their presence may have also had something to do with the action of the company. The trouble is worse this year, of course, than usual, owing to the drouth, but every year there are the same complaints in regard to low water and foul smells, owing to the water being drawn off by this company.
They may make a saving of a few dollars, by using this water, but the loss to both Newton and Waltham is a hundred times greater, in having what should be their most attractive summer feature, turned every year into a long drawn out malarious mudhole. All the money that has been and is to be expended, in beautifying the river banks,
will be wasted if something is not done
to have this nuisance abated.

THE NEW YORK JOURNAL of Commerce tells the Massachusetts courts that they ought to read the news from Washington. They would not dare to enjoin Congress; how then can they dare to enjoin the sugar trust, which has proved itself greater than Congress, and makes Congress do what it wishes? Judge Barker must be more careful or he will find himself in rebellion against the supreme authority. Some people think it is useless to maintain the United States Senate, as a good deal of money could be saved by abolishing that body and letting the sugar and other trusts legislate directly, without being put to the needless expense of "fixing" senators.

THE sentiment against cruelty to animals seems to be all pervading and a driver who abuses his horse does so at his own peril. The other day a handsome horse drawing a load of coal was frightened by an electric car. The car stopped and the driver began to ply his whip, but desisted under a fusillade of remonstrances from motorman, conductor and passengers, and the conductor went to the horse, patted his head and led him past the car. It was a hot day incident that pleased all the spectators, especially as the driver seemed wilted with astonishment that any one should object to his using a whip on a horse.

ARCHISON stockholders have learned again this week the old lesson, of how their interests have been sacrificed by dishonest management. The reorganization management seems to have been even more dishonest than the one they succeeded. The principle seems to have been that of mulcting the great majority of people to make a few rich, and it is little wonder that the people are losing all confidence in any scheme of reorganization.

THE Newton Athletic Association is sending out circulars giving plans of their proposed new club house to be erected near the Playground at Newton Centre, and conveying a very delicate hint that subscriptions will soon be called for. A good athletic association with its games and out door events is of benefit to any city, and this association has done so well in its brief history that it deserves encouragement.

THE people of Boston voted on Tuesday in favor of the Meigs' bill, by a total of 15,492 in favor to 14,214 against. The outside wards are responsible for the decision, although the vote was a very small one. Another company is thus given a franchise, when it should be made to pay heavily for such a valuable thing.

BLASTING GELATIN.

One of the Most Important Explosives, and How It Is Made.

By far the most important as well as the latest form of dynamite or solidified nitroglycerin are those designated not too happily as "blasting gelatins."
Many persons imagine, quite naturally,
that these consist of some form of gelatin, isinglass or glue, converted by chemical means into a powerful explosive. But "blasting gelatin" contains no particle whatever of gelatin, properly so called, the term being applied to a mixture of nitroglycerin and a nitrocel-lulose. It is prepared at Ardeer, in Ayrshire, N. B., by heating nitroglycerin in "jacketed" pans to between 40 degrees and water at 60 degrees C.—140 degrees F.—a certain proportion of dry gun cotton of the "soluble" kind. A current of hot water at 60 degrees C.— 140 degrees F.—circulating between the outer and inner pans keeps the contents of the latter at the required temperature, and the mixing is effected by mechanical stirrers.

Any rise of temperature above 45 degrees C.—113 degrees F.—is quickly checked by turning into the outer "jacket" a stream of cold water in place of the hot for a time. In the course of about an hour the nitrocellulose is dissolved in the nitroglycerin, the two bodies uniting to form a more or less stiff homogeneous jelly. It may indeed be compared to the photographic collodion, thickened by evaporation, the gun cotton having been dissolved not in the usual alcohol-ether mixture, but in ni-troglycerin. When composed of 98 per cent of the latter, with 7 per cent cotton, we get a most powerful explosive.
Mr. G. MacRobert, the manager at Ardeer, observes upon this point:

"Of all the nitroglycerin explosives blasting gelatin is the strongest. If the energy of dynamite be represented by 100, that of blasting gelatin will be 150.
Nitroglycerin itself shows less energy than blasting gelatin."—Nineteenth Century.

Cleopatra's Rival.

The beautiful Octavia, the wife of the great general, but weak and infamous, Antonius, was a woman of rare personal integrity and moral worth.
When Antonius for the second time,
and this irremediably, fell under the sway of the incomparable fascinations of Cleopatra, Octavia not only maintained the dignity of her husband's house and took care of her own and An-tonius' children, but also those he had had by Fulvia, one of his previous wives. Of this Fulvia Plutarch slyly remarks:

It was her ambition to govern those that governed and to command the leaders of armies. It was to Fulvia that Cleopatra was obliged for teaching An-tonius due submission to female authority. He had gone through such a course of discipline as made him perfectly tractable when he came into her hands.

—The sudden death of Mrs. Sursey Sheehan Monday afternoon in the yard of her home here, closes a strange career. Monday afternoon, while in the yard, she was seen to suddenly fall to the ground. When assistance arrived she was dead. Death was due to heart disease. Mrs. Sheehan was 65 years of age. For years she had lived upon Crafts street, her home being located in the midst of a plot of land which furnished her subsistence. Three years ago her husband died. Children were born to the couple, but when they attained a proper age which fitted them for work they suddenly disappeared from home. All of the work about the miniature farm during the latter part of her husband's life was done by Mrs. Sheehan, and her figure, wielding a hoe, was a familiar sight to residents here.

—Mr. George W. Morse sailed Wednesday for Europe.
—Mrs. Dr. Hopkins and family have gone to Maine for an extended stay.
—Dea. E. Stiles and family are summering at Milford, N. H.
—Mr. A. R. Andrews and family have returned from Popham Beach, Me.
—Mr. and Mrs. George R. Pulsifer have returned from Bailey's Island, Me.

—There are letters at the postoffice for Robert D. Endicott, Mrs. Harrigan, Miss Carrie Lewis, Mrs. M. R. McLean, Mr. Howard McMillan and Miss Maggie Wrenn.
—Mr. Carl Zeigler and family of St. Louis, Mo., are visiting friends here. Mr. Zeigler is interested in the famous Burch brewery.

—When will Washington street be widened? People are beginning to show a great amount of curiosity relative to when the work is to be commenced, the recent surveys by the city engineer's assistants having suggested an early commencement of the improvement.
—A party of about 20 Newtonville people members of Waban lodge, I. O. O. F., and Norumbega tribe 76, I. O. R. M., enjoyed a pleasant outing yesterday at Sawin's Grove, Dover. A clam bake was one of the delectable features and the boys had altogether a jolly, good time.

—Mavor Fenno has taken steps to stop the sale of prize packages of candy to juveniles which contain a worthless mixture and a still more worthless collection of pictures after the style of those given away with cigarettes. Some of the pictures are disgusting and unfit in every way to reach the hands of innocent young people.

—Mrs. Alex Griswold and son Chester are in Wolfboro. They are to be away several weeks, taking in the Kearsarge Mountains before returning home. Chester attracted considerable attention among the summer guests at Wolfboro, and the young "boy orator" proved a great favorite with the vacationists.

—The management of the social clubs in this vicinity are considering the question of arranging a billiard, pool, whist and bowling tournament as one of the coming winter forms of entertainment and amusement. There is a group of clubs available on account of being accessible to the street and steam railway lines. These are the Newton, Allston, Neighborhood, Newton A. A., Newton Boat and Newton Highlands Clubs. The facilities for reaching any of these clubs are excellent, and all but one are within the city limits. A series of very interesting matches could be arranged, and it is thought, greater interest developed because larger numbers would be drawn through the combination of events scheduled for each night when the contesting teams met.

RIDDLES OF ANCIENT TIMES.

Anagrams and Acrostics Have Been Known Since the Days of the Psalmist.

It seems ridiculous that the people who lived hundreds and hundreds of years ago were more interested in puzzles than you and I are today. This is true nevertheless. The puzzles I refer to are those in writing, although the ancients probably occupied some of their spare time with strange and puzzling devices of wood and metal, as we do.

What a pleasure it is to solve the problems in our favorite magazines or newspapers! It is very good exercise for one's brains, too, and where a prize is offered to the fortunate boy or girl who first solves the puzzles of different kinds the work is more pleasant still in the anticipation of proving oneself a little cleverer than the others and of receiving the gift. We find that the acrostic is the most ancient form of puzzling mankind. Acrostic is Greek for a number of verses, the first letters of which form a word—sometimes a name and sometimes a sentence. The final letter may form a word, or, as Addison tells us, the letters will even run down the center of the verses as a seam. The Hebrew poets often made their verses run over the entire alphabet. Twelve of the psalms are written on this plan, the most notable being the one hundred and nineteenth. This has 22 divisions of stanzas, corresponding to the 22 letters of the Hebrew alphabet. Each stanza is formed of eight couplets, and the first line of each couplet in the first stanza in the original Hebrew begins with the letter aleph, the second commences with bet, the third with gimel and so on through the alphabet. The English divisions of the psalms are called after the Hebrew letter that began the couplets. It was also customary to compose verses on sacred subjects after the fashion of Hebrew acrostics. This was done with a view to aid memory, and such pieces were called abecedarian hymns.

The riddle is also of ancient origin. The Proverbs of the Bible, or sayings attributed to Solomon, are often in the form of riddles. Was it not the Queen of Sheba who proposed riddles to Solomon? The Koran, the scriptural book of the Mohammedans, also contains riddles, as do some books now in existence, written in Arabic and Persian. The ancient Egyptians also propounded riddles, and one of the seven wise men of Greece, who lived in the sixth century B. C., was celebrated for his riddles in verse. Homer, the Greek poet, according to a statement in Plutarch, died of vexation at not being able to solve a riddle. In the middle ages riddles were encouraged for amusement on winter nights in the baronial hall and also in the monastery. In later days some of the most brilliant men of letters contributed to the list of riddles.

The anagram, or transposition of the letters in words or sentences, was much in vogue in Greece in the olden times. The Cabalists, or Jewish doctors, thought that the anagram always pointed out a man's destiny, and if his name written backward or transposed in any way spelled a word with meaning they firmly believed it a revelation. The flatterers of James I of England proved his right to the British monarchy as the descendant of the mythical King Arthur from his name Charles James Stuart, which becomes "claims Arthur's seat."

The best anagrams are those which have in the new order of letters some significant appropriate to that from which they are formed. When Pilate asked, "Quid est veritas?" (What is truth?), he probably had no idea that his question answered itself. But it did. The transposition made it, "Est vir qui adest" (It is the man who is here). Anagrams were written as early as 250 B. C., and their name comes from the Greek words ana, backward, and gramma, writing.—Philadelphia Press.

Secret of Living Long.
The necessity of relative harmony throughout the entire physical system cannot be too strongly urged. Herein lies the chief secret of health and long life. Manifest weakness, or even predominant strength, in any part opens the avenue for the invasion of disease and the approach of death. What can be done for the realization and maintenance of structural and vital harmony? Space would fail us to give details adapted to varying conditions, but the underlying fundamental principle for its accomplishment may be imparted in few words. Strive to strengthen and develop those parts of the body which have been slightly by nature or weakened by disease or abuse; guard zealously such structures and see that they are never subjected to undue strain or too active exertion; neglect not the improvement of every part of the economy, but seek first to improve the weakest structures; look well to organs of vital importance—the heart, lungs, kidneys, etc.—and seek especially to advance their good. A fine physique is not to be ignored, but of far greater importance are a

THE PHANTOM ARMY.

And I saw a phantom army come,
With never a sound of drum,
But keeping step to a muffled hum
Of wailing lamentation;
The martyred heroes of Malvern Hill,
Of Gettysburg and Chancellorsville—
The men whose wasted bodies fill
The patriot graves of the nation.

And there came the unknown dead, the men
Who died in fever swamps and fens,
Who slowly starved of prison pen,
And marching beside the others
Came the dusky martyrs of Pillow's fight,
With limbs enfranchised and bearing bright,
I thought—'twas the pale moonlight—
They looked as white as their brothers.

And so all night marched the nation's dead,
With never a banner above them spread,
No sign save the bare, uncovered head
Of their silent, grim reviewer,
With never an arch but the vaulted sky,
With not a flower save those which lie
On distant graves, for love could buy
No gift that was purer or truer.

So all night long moved the strange array;
I watched for one who had passed away
With a reverent awe and wonder,
Till a blue cap waved in the lengthening line,
Till I knew that one who was kin of mine
Had come, and I spoke—and, lo! that sign Awakened me from my slumber.

A DOUBLE RESCUE.

A milk white beach of coral sand, on which were strewn thousands of exquisite shells and strange sponge forms. In front, dancing blue waters of a southern sea, stretching away into infinite space and ruffled into flashing white caps by the strong breath of the trade wind. Back of the beach stood a dense grove of cocoanut palms, stately and most graceful of trees. The myriad slender tips of their huge leaves rustled in the warm wind like the sharp pattering of rain drops in a heavy shower. Down where the white trunks shot, tall and slender, to the dim arches of the living roof all was in dark, cool shadow, flecked now and then by dancing points of golden sunlight.

Mingled with the salt breath of the sea was a faint odor from spathes of corn colored blossoms high up among the leaf crowns. Beneath these hung clusters of fruit in all stages of development, from the size of a marble to that of a football. On the ground lay scores of the great brown, ripened cocoanuts, of so little value in that tropic land that no one cared to pick them up. They were protected by tough three cornered husks so thick as to more than double their actual size.

On one of them, turned on end, sat a boy wearing a broad brimmed, high crowned hat of palm-leaf braid. He was clad in a white cotton shirt and brown linen trousers turned up at the bottom. His feet were bare, and his legs, hands and face were as brown as an Indian's. He presented an ideal picture of youthful strength and that perfect health only to be acquired through out of door sunshine.

His face, generally bright and happy, was clouded as he sat, with elbows on his knees, resting his chin in his hands and gazing out over the glistening waters. The object on which his eyes were fixed was a small schooner moored 100 yards from shore. She was not more than 30 feet over all in length, but was broad of beam and solidly built.

The month was March, and the beach was that of one of those low cut, fertile Florida keys that form the southernmost limit of the United States territory.

The boy was John Albury, commonly called Grit, to distinguish him from the many other John Alburys of that region.

The schooner was the Polyanthus, formerly owned by Grit's father, who had been lost at sea the autumn before in a boat belonging to a neighbor.

For many years, while he was a widower, Mr. Albury had only occupied his home on the key at long intervals, spending most of the time with his boy and girl, Grit and Matey, on board the Polyanthus wrecking, sponging, fishing, while waiting for his cocoanut grove to come into bearing, and, as he finally hoped, to yield him an income.

The life proved a very happy one for all three, and it was a sad day for the children when it was ended by the appearance of a stepmother, who, coming from inland on the mainland, had no knowledge of nor love for boats or the water. She was not unkind, but she instituted a new order of things, strongly resented by the sailor boy and girl. Mr. Albury was persuaded to clear land and put in a crop. Grit weeded tomatoes. Matey was made to sew and do housework, while both children were taught to read and write.

Now they had very little of the sailing that they so dearly loved and for which they longed, for Mrs. Albury could see no good in boats. She even advised her husband to sell the dear old Polyanthus and ship his crops by the regular Key West trading schooner, but this, to Grit's great satisfaction, he steadily refused to do, though he so far yielded to his wife's prejudices as to spend most of his time on shore while the "Poly" swung idly at her moorings.

When the father was lost at sea in the dreadful hurricane that nearly swept away their home as well, Mrs. Albury's aversion to boats became so bitter that she would sell the Polyanthus to the first person who would offer $100 for her.

"But, mother, $100 is a ridiculous price for a fine boat like the Poly," urged Grit. "She can make that in a single month."

"She never has since I have known anything about her," replied Mrs. Albury.

"No, for she hasn't had a chance. You just let me take her, and I'll show you how much she can make."

"And get drowned like your poor father and leave me and Matey to tend the crop. No, indeed, sir! You are too valuable to waste that way. I need you ashore, and so do the tomatoes. They'd bring in more money than any boat that ever was built; you see if they don't. I shouldn't be surprised if we made all of $200 off the crop this year and twice that much after we get all of the land cleared and planted."

"But boats can make as much as that, mother, and more too. Why, at a wreck!"

"Nonsense! There aren't any wrecks nowadays, and if there were what could a boy like you do at one? No, sir; you stick to tomatoes. They're safe and sure, and I'll put temptation out of your way by selling that boat first chance I get. You'll thank me for it in the end, see if you don't."

Now, the fatal day had nearly arrived. A man in Key West had sent word that he was coming to look at the Polyanthus and would probably buy her if she proved as represented. He might appear at any moment, and that was the reason why Grit Albury sat gazing sadly at the dear boat on that glorious March afternoon, instead of gathering the last of the tomato crop, which was expected to realize $200.

As the boy slowly rose to return to his work there came a sound of flying feet, and Matey's voice was heard, calling in joyous tones:

"Grit! Oh, Grit! Mother wants you to catch her a mess of fish and says I can go with you."

The lad only answered: "All right, sister. Come along," but a sudden resolution, that he did not put into words, flashed into his mind. Two minutes later a single skillful throw of a cast net into the school of sardines, always swarming alongshore, had provided a sufficiency of bait, and a light skiff was dancing merrily over the blue waves.

"Why, Grit! Where are you going?" demanded Matey as the skiff was headed directly for the Polyanthus.

"Out to the reef after fish," was the answer.

"But Grit!"

"Never mind the buts now, little girl. That's where we are going, and we're going in the schooner too. Mother said fish, but so far as I have heard she didn't say what kind of fish, and so, of course, meant the best fish, such as Spanish mackerel, kingfish, yellow tails or drums. You know that we can't find those shut off the reef any more'n we can go out to where they are in a skiff. Besides, sister, it's our very last chance for a sail in the old Poly. She's going to be sold, or rather given away, tomorrow, and I don't suppose we'll ever see her again or own another boat."

Of course this was convincing, for Matey not only dearly loved to sail, but was firm in her belief that whatever Grit said or did was right. Thus an hour later saw the little schooner, after a glorious run across the broad Hawk channel, anchored just inside the great coral reef that borders the gulf stream for more than 200 miles, and on which huge breakers were dashing themselves into showers of glistening spray. The fishing was superb and so absorbing that the sun was sinking into its bed of crimson and gold ere either Grit or Matey thought of starting for home.

When at length they were ready to go and attempted to get up the anchor, all their strength on the windlass failed to budge it. A fluke had caught beneath some great bunch of coral, and with boylike carelessness Grit had neglected to provide a trip line. It was quite dark before he abandoned the attempt to recover their anchor and said cheerfully: "Never mind, Matey, girl. It won't hurt us to stay out here overnight, and as soon as it comes light again I'll dive down there and see what the matter. I'm not going to cut the cable and lose that brand new anchor unless I have to, that's sure."

So they cooked a supper of fish and made themselves so comfortable in the snug little cabin that they rather rejoiced in their adventure than otherwise. So soundly did they sleep that night that not until he was flung from his locker on the cabin floor did Grit awaken to the fact that the Poly was pitching madly and that a gale was shrieking through her taut rigging. Calling to Matey, the boy sprang on the deck, where he was well nigh beaten down by the furious squall of wind and rain that just then hurried itself against the schooner.

There was an instant of quivering strain. Then something gave way, and Grit knew what had happened. The tense cable had parted, and they were helplessly drifting at the mercy of the storm. For a moment even Grit's stout heart quailed. He could see nothing save the ghostlike forms of leaping breakers that seemed to crowd about him from all sides. He could not even tell from which direction the squall was blowing. Matey had joined him in the cockpit, with as full an understanding of the situation as his own. No words passed between them, for none could have been heard above the shriek of wind and the roar of waters. They seemed to be driving with frightful speed, and as the brother and sister stood hand in hand, waiting their fate, they expected that each succeeding moment would see their craft dashed in pieces on the cruel reef.

Minutes passed, and still they swept on. Suddenly Grit uttered a great cry of relief that was almost a sob.

"We've passed the breakers! We're clear of the reef! We're out in the gulf! We're safe, Matey, girl!" he shouted.

To any one not a sailor it would have seemed that they were anything but safe, out in the open sea, driving through inky darkness, and with the worst squall of the season howling furiously about them, but Matey was a sailor. She knew, and down in her heart arose a fervent prayer of thankfulness.

The next change of scene was most surprising. Daylight had come; the sun was rising. Before a gentle breeze, with all sails set, the Polyanthus was approaching a great steamship that had struck on an outlying spur of the reef during the blinding bewilderment of the recent squall.

"I do believe it's a wreck!" Matey had exclaimed rapturously, when her sharp eyes first discovered the stranded ship.

"Oh, if it only should be!" cried Grit, who could hardly believe that so great a piece of good fortune had be-

"FOLLOW ME 'OME."

There was no one like 'im, 'orse or foot
Nor any of the guns I knew,
And because it was so, why, 'o course he went
An' died,
Which is just what the best men do.

So it's knock out your pipes an' follow me,
An' it's finish up your swipes an' follow me,
Oh, 'ark to the big drum callin',
Follow me—follow me 'ome!

'Is mare she neigs the 'ole day long,
She paws the 'ole night through,
An' she won't take 'er feed 'cause o' waitin' for
'a stop,
Which is just what a beast would do.

'Is girl she goes with a bombardier
Here 'er month is through,
An' the banners are up in church, for she's got the bagger hooked,
Which is just what a girl would do.

We fought 'bout a dog—last week it were—
No more than a round or two,
But I strook 'im 'im cruel 'ard, an' I wish I 'adn't
now,
Which is just what a man can't do.

'E was all that I 'ad in the way of a friend,
An' 'e 'ad to find one new,
But 'is give me pay an' stripe for to get the bagger back,
Which it's just too late to do.

So it's knock out your pipes an' follow me,
An' it's finish up your swipes an' follow me,
Oh, 'ark to the fife a crawlin',
Follow me—follow me 'ome!

Take 'im away! 'E's gone where the best men
go.
Take 'im away! An' the gun wheels turnin'
slow.

Take 'im away! There's more from the place
'e come.
Take 'im away, with the limber an' the drum.

For it's "Three rounds blank" an' follow me,
An' it's "Thirteen rank" an' follow me.
Oh, pass the love o' woman,
Follow me—follow me 'ome!

WITH HIS WHIP.

He Flicked the Gun From the Stage Robber's Hand.

"There is quite a difference between staging in the early days of the state and now," said William Miller, the owner of the stage line running from Cazadero to Ukiah.

"When I came here from Boston in 1854, I drifted about a bit and finally went into the service of Charles Mc-Laughlin, the man who was afterward killed by Jerome Cox. He was the owner of the longest stage line in California at that time. It ran with relays from San Jose to Los Angeles.

"I remember once in a lonely coast range canyon, through which the road wound, we had a little experience that was thrilling for the moment. It was about 10 o'clock and a moonlight night.
I was just putting the horses through.
The stage was full of passengers, and there was a heavy treasure box.

"Just as I got around a bend in the road I saw a figure of a man on horseback standing by the side of the road.
He yelled to stop, and I saw a gun barrel gleam in the moonlight. The horses were going at a speed that might be called breakneck, and I just made up my mind to take the chance of getting through. I saw the gun raised to the fellow's shoulder as we approached. I had my long whip in my hand, and with a desperation born of peril of the moment I made a vicious swipe at him.

"I don't know how it occurred, but the lash wound itself around the gun, and as we dashed by the whip was drawn fast, and I knew it had caught, so held fast. I was nearly pulled out of my seat, but the gun was dragged from the robber's hand and fell to the ground.
At the same time it was discharged by the shock. It rattled along the road for quite a distance before the whiplash un-wound itself. I don't know what the highwayman thought, but I'll bet he was surprised." —San Francisco Call.

Trouble in the Browning Society.

A reading of a line of Browning's which I don't think has ever presented itself to the Browning society was offered in all honesty the other day by a young gentleman reading aloud to a young lady, at her request—need I say she was a Bostonienne—the "One Word More" with which Browning dedicated his "Men and Women" to his wife.

He who blows through bronze may breathe through silver
the reader gave forth with cadenced correctness, but

He who paints in fresco takes a hairbrush
was too much for an honest, literal soul.
He read it "hair-brush"—hyphenized, accent on "hair"—too evidently understanding and unquestionably accepting it not as a refined implement of art, but as the homely adjunct of the dressing table. Nothing can ever make that line again, for that young woman, fit into a poet's dream. Nor will he ever be asked to read Browning to her more.—

The Growth of Electric Railroads.

"The growth of the use of electricity
as a motive power is remarkable," said
E. L. Carson, an electrician of Boston.
"Two years ago there were only 161
electric railways in the United States, while now there are over 500. Six years ago an electric car with two motors cost $4,500, while the bids for the last cost
$1,500, and the former was the price
at which it was given, the manufacturers being reliable men. It seems singular that with such a constantly increasing demand there should be such competition as to run prices down to one-seventh of what was paid six years ago, but such is the case, and before it stops there will be very few lines of street railroad in the country not run by electricity." — Cincinnati Enquirer.

A Costly Opinion.

Judge Ira Perley believed in the justice of his client's cause. He would not enlist in it otherwise. At one time sharper tried to retain him and was smoothing over his crooked conduct as well as he knew how, when the judge astonished him by exclaiming, "I think you have acted like an infernal scoundrel, sir!"

"Is there any charge for that opinion?"

"Yes, sir; $5!" —San Francisco Argonaut.

LITERARY NOTES.

Dr. Fanet of Harley Street is the title of a powerful story of a woman's life, in Appleton's Town and Country Library. It is described as remarkably dramatic and vivid. The author is Arabella Kenealy.

For the last year the women have had the upper hand in fiction, but a reaction appears to have begun with the appearance of a striking story, George Mandeville's Husband, which is to be published shortly in Appleton's Town and Country Library. We have heard a great deal of the "revolt of the daughters." This novel is said to offer a vivid if not inviting picture of the "advanced woman" and the effects of her teachings, and its appearance at this time is certain to provoke abundant discussion and criticism. The book is understood to be due to a well-known writer whose identity is concealed under a nom de plume.

Mr. Warner's new novel, "The Golden House," with Mr. Smalley's illustrations, begun in the July number of Harper's Magazine, is a remarkable exposition of social life in New York, including all classes of people. It is a sequel to Mr. Warner's first novel, "A Little Journey in the World," but takes a wider scope. Its vivid portraiture, genial charm and bright humor will somewhat compensate the reader for the absence in future numbers of Mr. Du Maurier's delightful story of "Tribby."

Harper's Magazine for August contains "Old Monmouth," (Northeastern New Jersey and its Coast Resorts) by Julian Ralph; "Up the Norway Coast," (An Ideal Summer Excursion) by George Card Pease; "A Few Edible Toadstools and Mushrooms," (with illustrations of Eighteen Varieties) by W. Hamilton Gibson; "My First Visit to New England," (Impressions of Hawthorne, Emerson, and Thoreau) by William Dean Howells; "Stubble and Slough in Dakota," (with Pictures by the Author) by Frederic Remington; "Tribby," (Concluding Instalment) by George Du Maurier; and six complete short stories. The "Editor's Study" discusses the American Spirit, Vulgarity in Fiction, and the proposed memorial to George William Curtis.

She Knew Her Mother.

(From the New York Press.)

"What about your parents' consent, Julia?" asked the youth.

"Mother favors you and father opposes you," answered the maiden; "they have now retired to confer."

"What hope is there of the conference agreeing favorably?"

"If it were anybody but mother that was conferring with father I should fear a disagreement, but as it is mother, my mind is easy. I know mother."

Her Gratitude.

(From the Chicago Inter-Ocean.)

"Did that young girl that Tompkins befriended at the seashore show any gratitude for what he'd done?"

"Well, I should say not! She married him."

A Representative School.

Public Opinion in its last issue gives an illustrated article on the best private schools in the country, and among the dozen or so mentioned at length were the West Newton English and Classical school, which was described as follows:

Colonel T. W. Higginson says: "I believe heartily and fully in co-education. The Creator, who placed boys and girls together in families, where the association of brothers and sisters is mutually helpful, knew what was best for humanity." The West Newton English and Classical school at West Newton, Massachusetts, has acted on this principle for nearly forty years, and experience has confirmed the belief that co-education, under careful management, leads to a better moral and mental development. The system in use at this school is very interesting. The pupils are divided among several families, and while the family life is emphasized at all times, by associating the home pupils with day pupils for school purposes the advantages of a well-graded select school are secured as well.

The Allen School is designed to prepare boys and girls for entrance to any college or scientific school, to give a thorough English education to those about to enter mercantile pursuits, and to lead to an intelligent manhood and womanhood. The principles of Pestalozzi and of Froebel are made the basis of all instruction. To let the child know his capabilities and his limitations, to encourage habits of correct thought and reasoning, and to produce a symmetrical development of the whole nature—these are the underlying ideas throughout.

In connection with the Academic Department is a training school, for scholars from nine to thirteen years of age. The most natural methods are followed and the work is very interesting. Special attention is paid to Natural Science from the first. Here, again, the effort is to show the interrelation of the various concrete sciences. Careful instruction is given in all the natural sciences, and in response to the demands of some of the larger colleges for a more thorough course in experimental physics and chemistry, the laboratories have been thoroughly refitted. Physical education is strongly emphasized; facilities are provided for every form of exercise, including swimming.

Special facilities are provided for those pupils who require additional care and assistance in their work, such as foreigners learning the language, or pupils who are from any cause backward in their studies. The school spirit is wonderful. Last June more than one thousand alumni of the school, ladies and gentlemen, nearly every state in the union as well as several foreign countries being represented, assembled at Auburn-dale, near West Newton. The reunion was the first in the history of the school, and there were present some who had attended the school in the first year of its existence, 1854. A complete catalogue of the alumni, covering the whole life of the school, makes very interesting reading. Many men and women whose names are recognized everywhere, owe much of their success to the training they secured at West Newton.

Newton's Early Days.

(Sunday Herald.)

That conditions are constantly improving is evident to any one who has a knowledge of general customs as they existed during the early days of the present century. In an autobiography recently printed, written by a deceased Boston merchant, who seventy years ago went to work as a boy in a large country store in Newton, which was run in connection with a rolling mill and nail factory at that place, the statement is made:

In our store was to be found almost everything that a family would require. All kinds of dry goods, for ladies' wear as well as for men. West India goods and a great variety of provisions. In addition, the store was well supplied with all kinds of spirits and wines. At that time it was customary for almost every one to use more or less spirits. Temperance societies were then hardly known, and at our place the sale of liquor was a large part of the business. One hoghead of New England rum was on the average sold in ten days, a hoghead of Santa Cruz rum in about a month, and quite a large quantity of Holland gin and brandy, beside wines of different kinds, very much of which was sold by the glass. Many of the workmen in the rolling mill and nail factory would drink a quart each day, beside an occasional glass at the counter in the morning and evening. There was also considerable sold by the gallon. The rolling mills used annually from 400 to 500 cords of wood, which was brought from Natick, Sherborn, Hopkinton and Holliston, and paid for usually from the store, the farmers always bringing their wood of logs to be piled, while every housekeeper had his jug or demijohn to be used for the same purpose. I remember that old Dr. Grafton, the Baptist minister, whose church I attended, used to ride up to the store in his square-topped chaise and bring his demijohn to be filled with brandy, this occurring perhaps once in two or three months. Once in a quarter a settlement was made with the employees, when it was found that about one-third of their earnings had been paid by charges for liquor."

This is an illustration of what seems at the present time an entirely impossible condition of affairs, and is especially noteworthy because at that time the persons who were thus freely indulging in intoxicating liquors of various kinds were almost entirely native-born Americans. Their grandchildren or great-grandchildren could be depended upon either to entirely abstain from the use of alcoholic beverages or to take them in such small quantities and at such wide intervals as to make impossible the drunkenness that was then only too prevalent. It is much more than probable that an equally significant and desirable change will take place in the next sixty or seventy years, and that, so far as drunkenness is concerned, there will be found in this country in the time of our grandchildren very little of it, and this not because of local option, but because of a strengthened sense of self-respect and a public opinion which will condemn in a most forcible manner those who are so weak in mind as to drink to excess.

The usual treatment of catarrh is very unsatisfactory, as thousands can testify. Proper local treatment is positively necessary to success, but many of the most of the remedies in general use afford but temporary relief. A cure certainly cannot be expected from snuffs, powders, douches and washes. Ely's Cream Balm, which is so highly commended, is a remedy which combines the important requisites of quick action, specific curative power, with perfect safety and pleasantness to the patient. The druggists all sell it.

As to Marriage.

(From the Detroit Free Press.)

Father—I understand you think of getting married?
Son—Yes, sir.
Father—Have you given the matter your calm consideration, and deliberated thoroughly upon the gravity and importance of the step, as well as upon the uncertainties and possibilities of the new relation?
Son—No, sir.
Father—You have not? And why have you not?
Son—Because, sir, I really want to get married.
Father—Um—er—ah—I guess you are right about it. Go ahead; it's the only way I fancy.

"I suppose," said the wild-eyed stranger, with ferocious sarcasm, "you hang anarchists in this town?" "Not much," replied the quiet citizen. "When we have a mild case of anarchy in this town, we put the victim in an insane hospital. If he has it badly we put him to work on the stone pile." And the wild-eyed stranger, with the bomb in his pocket, went on to the next town.

He retired rather early Sunday evening, and after disrobing he carefully placed his trousers upon a chair, near the head of the bed. In a pocket of the trousers was $223. Not once through the night did he awake, but in the morning, when he donned his clothes, he placed his hands in his pockets and was startled to find that his money was missing. A search of the house revealed the fact that some one had forced an entrance during the night and had abstracted the roll from his pocket while he slept. —It appears by the quantity of old paper that is lying around the village to be necessary to urge the people to try to help the good work of the Improvement Association in this matter. The public waste barrels have been placed in convenient locations and it seems as though everybody might take the trouble to walk a few steps out of their way to throw their envelopes, etc., into these receptacles. It is said that there either has been, or is to be passed, an order by the city government making it a punishable offence to throw rubbish in the street. It is understood that the city government, following in the good work of our Improvement Association here have, ordered waste barrels for every village in Newton. For the good of all this extremely bad weather, every one should help to keep the city streets in good condition.

—The silk mill operatives who attracted attention early in the spring by going out on a strike because the firm would not restore the old wage schedule, returned to work Monday morning. They went back under the terms of the original proposition made them by William Ryle & Co., when they requested a raise. They were working on a reduced wage schedule and on half time. There are about 300 operatives in force. The operatives refused to work unless the wages were advanced, and the mills and operatives have since been practically idle. Repeated attempts have been made by the silk girls to gain their point, but the firm have refused to arbitrate or in any way alter their first proposition, as business was so dull. At a meeting which the girls held last week, they decided by a vote of 36 to 7 to accept the terms offered by the firm and return to work. The company were informed of their determination and consented to open the mills. Since the shut down a large amount of repairing has been going on at the mills and quite a lot of machinery have been set up and put in order for work. The mills are in better condition for business than for years. There are about 300 operatives now at work. The girls will receive an average of $4.50 per week on full time.
